Reserve Unit Asks Power Of Lending To Business

By The Associated Press

The Federal Reserve System's chief officer yesterday proposed that Congress authorize it to lend up to 500 million dollars to business firms—especially small business.

Chairman Thomas B. McCabe of the Federal Reserve Board made the proposal in a communication to a Senate-House committee that has undertaken a study of money and credit policies.

McCabe recommended that the 12 Federal Reserve Banks, using "only their own funds," take over part of the lending activities now carried on by the Government's Reconstruction Finance Corporation with funds derived from taxation.

Would Take Part in Credits

His proposal, advanced at a time when RFC lending policies are under fresh fire from Senators Fulbright (D., Ark.) and Capehart (R., Ind.) because of a $44,400,000 loan to auto-maker Henry J. Kaiser, would work this way:

Unlike the RFC, the Reserve banks would not go in for lending by themselves but would take part in credits given by private banks to business enterprises, notably to aid "small business in time of need."

Private banks would have to put up at least 10 percent of the total loan. They would be allowed by the Reserve banks, furthermore, to take over any part or all the rest at any time they wanted during the life of the loan.

The time limit of any of these joint loans would be 10 years.

To assure that "smaller businesses" would get at least half the aid extended within the 500 million dollar limit on Reserve bank participation, the following provision would be made:

Loans individually in excess of $100,000 would not be allowed to exceed $250,000 at any time.

Answers List of Questions

RFC, now permitted to make business loans where aid "is not otherwise available on reasonable terms," would be forbidden to lend to enterprises to which credit was available from private banks or the Federal Reserve Banks.

McCabe's suggestions were in a 145-page, 36,000-word answer to a list of questions by Senator Douglas (D., Ill.).

Douglas, an economist, heads a subgroup conducting a study for the Senate-House Committee on the Economic Report.

McCabe said there was room for business lending by both the Reserve banks and the RFC—provided the RFC confined itself to cases "not suitable" for Reserve bank or private bank aid.

"Examples," he said, "are to be found in the financing of railroads, air carriers and large public projects, and in the loans made by the corporation (RFC) for disaster relief.

"Aside from loans of this type,

Specialists Give Approval for Two Anti-TB Drugs

Atlanta, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—Nearly 200 specialists today approved streptomycin and a new drug, TB-1, for treating tuberculosis, but turned thumbs down on two other new drugs, neomycin and aureomycin.

The scientists passed limited approval on P-A-S, another new drug against tuberculosis.

Conclusions were announced jointly by leading specialists from the United States as they ended the eighth streptomycin conference sponsored by the Veterans' Administration.

His Criticism Provokes Wrath

Swedes Feel Insulted, Think Elmer Thomas Better Go Home

Stockholm, Sweden, Nov. 13 (AP).—Several Swedish papers today slapped back editorially at Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) for his criticisms yesterday in Vienna of a Marshall Plan country which his colleagues identified as Sweden.

Thomas told reporters in the Austrian capital that the country to which he referred had snubbed his Senate Appropriations Committee during a visit there and had damaged its prospects for further American aid. He said the country in question had "helped no one in the last 135 years" and that any further United States assistance "will be over my protest."

A headline in one Swedish paper called the Senator's remarks "A Grave Insult." Another paper said Thomas was "a liar."

All papers carried the story on their first pages, and most had sarcastic comment on the Senator.

The Liberal Dagensnyheter, Sweden's biggest paper, termed Thomas' statement "twaddling nonsense . . . which does not deserve a factual reply." It also expressed some doubts as to the Senator's "mental acumen and his qualifications to represent abroad the mightiest country in the world."

Another Liberal organ, Stockholms-Tidningen, said in its front page headline: "U. S. Senator Rages Against Sweden, Which Did Not Bow Low Enough For Him—Grave Insult to Our Country."

Allies Reach Big Decisions On Germany

Bonn, Germany, Nov. 13 (AP).—Secretary of State Dean Acheson told a news conference today decisions of the three western foreign ministers in Paris should "contribute mightily" to German recovery.

He still did not disclose what those decisions by Britain, France, and the United States were.

Acheson paid the first visit by any minister of an occupying power to this West German capital. American and German flags were flying side by side as he arrived on United States High Commissioner John J. McCloy's streamlined green and silver train from Frankfurt. About 4000 Germans greeted him, waving hats and handkerchiefs.

Adenauer Summoned

During his eight-hour visit it was disclosed that Chancellor Konrad Adenauer has been summoned to a conference with all three Allied High Commissioners at Petersberg, near Bonn, on Tuesday to learn the decisions of the Paris conference.

Acheson said he had "very satisfactory" talks with West German political leaders. These included President Theodor Heuss, cabinet members, party leaders, the Allied high commissioners, a special conference with Chairman Kurt Schumacher, leader of the Social Democratic opposition, and a top secret talk with Adenauer.

The secretary said the Paris conference, which ended Friday, had discussed the policy of dismantling German factories for reparations, but had not discussed formation of a German army to help defend western Europe.

He said Germans must solve their own problems.

French Session Awaited

Presumably Adenauer's conference on Tuesday will be the start of negotiations with the high commissioners on decisions of the Paris meeting.

Western reticence may be due to the fact the French National Assembly does not meet until November 22 to debate German problems. Then it may be established how far the French Government can go toward meeting German desires.

The Petersberg negotiations with the high commissioners may develop how far the Germans are prepared to go in resolving French fears for security.

West German Group Asks Farben Power Return

Bonn, Germany, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—A group of rightist politicians demanded today that the huge I. G. Farben Chemical Combine be restored to its prewar power and that the Allies' trust-busting laws be declared null and void.

Seventeen leading Free Democratic delegates to the West German House of Representatives urged the government to ask the Allied High Commission to repeal directives breaking up the combine and barring its owners from further profits.

The delegates declared the Allied action, originally taken with Russia, lacked "any legal basis" because it provides for the requisition of the property of 300,000 private shareholders.

The Allied directive under attack ruled that:

1. The property of the I. G. Farben Combine will be requisitioned and controlled by the Allies.
2. The huge trust will be split into several minor plants working independently.
3. There will be no sale nor buying of I. G. Farben shares and other papers by anyone.

FAO Official Urges Global Food Stamps

By the United Press

Sir Herbert Broadley, deputy director-general of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, yesterday called for an "international food stamp plan" to give hungry peoples access to the food surpluses which are bothering more prosperous nations like the United States.

Moreover, he said in an interview, there seems to be a "very good chance" that some such plan will be worked out when the FAO's 58 member nations meet here November 21.

The FAO executive council meets today to prepare an agenda for the international conference.

Surpluses to Be Topic

The chief item of business is expected to be postwar crop surpluses and what to do about them.

Norris E. Dodd, FAO director general, will present a proposal for an "international commodity clearing house" to channel food surpluses into underfed countries without upsetting world market prices by "dumping" the commodities outright.

Sir Herbert noted that United States officials have been cool toward Dodd's plan and conceded that it would get nowhere without United States support. But he said he still thinks that "something will come out of the conference."

Favors Cut-Rate Prices

Dodd suggested international machinery that would permit dollar-short nations to buy United States surplus farm products either at cut-rate prices, or with IOUs.

In the latter case, the buyers would deposit sums of their own national currencies with the international agency with the promise of redeeming it eventually in dollars, when their exchange position improved.

High United States officials object that the foreign currency IOUs would pile up and delay the day when normal world trade can resume with free "convertibility" of dollars.

Sir Herbert indicated FAO leaders are perfectly willing to compromise on details to meet such objections.

What is needed, he said, is an "international mechanism" that would do on a world scale what the prewar food stamp plan did in the United States.

Bennett to Push Deportation of 'Nazi' Professor

Marenisco, Mich., Nov. 13 (AP).—Representative John B. Bennett (R., Mich.) said today he would insist that the United States deport Dr. E. V. Sittler, ousted Michigan Tech college professor.

Dr. Sittler was dismissed as professor of German at the college, in Houghton, Mich., after Representative Bennett charged he had been a Nazi and had broadcast for the Hitler government during the war. Bennett said the professor was brought to this country after the war solely to testify in Government trials.

Dr. Sittler said in a statement yesterday he went to Germany in 1939 to "assist Germany in the European struggle." He admitted having become a German citizen.

"In 1941," he said, "I thought it a tragic mistake that America should aid Soviet Russia to crush the only real bulwark against communism in the Western World, and I still think so."

Contracts With Union Signed By 2 More Steel Companies

Pittsburgh, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—Two more steel companies signed with the CIO United Steel Workers Union today in the final stages of the six-week strike. The companies employ 20,000 workers.

Steel production began curving upward as the industry laid plans to increase tonnage beyond pre-strike levels to meet needs of steel-starved factories.

The two companies signed a "Bethlehem-type" agreement with the CIO United Steelworkers today, reducing the number of strike-idle to 48,000. Wheeling Steel Corp. came to terms after a 15-hour bargaining session. The Atlantic Steel Co. of Atlanta reached an agreement ending a strike of nearly 2000 employes.

More than 8,500,000 net tons of ingot production were lost, enough steel to build six million automobiles. The cost of the finished steel lost was valued at 700 million dollars.

The steelworkers themselves lost more than 178 million dollars in wages. Statisticians estimated that they will have to work two full years to regain in future social security benefits the wages they lost during the six-week strike.

The union predicted that all major producers will be in the fold by the end of this week and that at least five smaller producers probably would sign before Thursday.

Of the 19 leading steel companies listed by the President's fact-finding board only one appeared ready to hold out. Crucible Steel Co., operating at a loss before the strike began, informed the union that it was not financially able to meet the cost of $100-a-month pensions and an insurance plan. The company appealed for special consideration but was turned down.

Magazine Predicts Rationing of Steel

Cleveland, Nov. 13 (AP).—Steel Magazine predicted today that the supply of steel will be short through April, and possibly longer.

Rationing, at least of an informal nature, appears a certainty, the magazine continued, estimating that more than 8,500,000 net tons of ingots were lost from 1949 production during the strike which started October 1.

Another two million tons, Steel added, possibly will be lost while mills gets back in operation.

Lewis Moves To Talk Peace At Operators' Convenience

By The Associated Press

John L. Lewis bid again yesterday for peace talks with coal operators, saying he awaits their "convenience" now that the steel strike is virtually settled.

The United Mine Workers' chief moved to get contract negotiations renewed as Government labor officials studied their next step in trying to avert a new mine walkout on December 1.

That is the expiration date of a truce which Lewis ordered last Wednesday to end a 52-day soft coal strike.

In view of Lewis' expressed willingness to meet with the mine owners, another Government attempt to get him and the operators into contract talks may be made.

Views Are Far Apart

There was a question whether the operators were ready to talk with Lewis, in view of their far-apart views on contract terms. Previous talks apparently got nowhere and the operators dropped out.

So more positive White House steps still are being considered. If the Government is to change course, a decision may come this week.

Cyrus Ching, Mediation Service director, sought to have operators and Lewis sit down with him Thursday, but Lewis said he couldn't be there until Monday. Ching, having other business Monday, called it off.

Lewis was still in New York yesterday, but a spokesman at headquarters of the United Mine Workers Union here said he is returning.

The spokesman said that Lewis, "having concluded business in New York City, will be at his desk in Washington tomorrow morning, awaiting the convenience of the coal operators.

Puts Next Move Up to Them

"The next move is up to these coal operators.

"Now that the operators are relieved of their commitments to the steel industry and associated financial interests, there is no reason for continuing their stubborn refusal to meet with the union.

"The coal operators walked out of negotiations, the mine workers walked back into the mines voluntarily as a contribution to the American public.

"It is time for the coal operators to walk back into collective bargaining."

Lewis had first bid for talks with the operators at a news conference in New York Friday night. Their reaction then was there was little use resuming negotiations with Lewis.

The operators want a renewal of the old contract, expired last July 1, plus some concessions by Lewis.

Lewis wants more wages and shorter hours for miners, together with a boost in the 20-cents-a-ton royalty on coal production which finances the welfare fund.

Mediation Director Ching was planning a new conference with the White House today.

Laborite Scolds Archbishop for 'Political Bias'

London, Nov. 13 (AP).—War Minister Emanuel Shinwell tonight bitterly accused the Archbishop of York of "political bias."

The attack on the second ranking prelate in the established church was the first reply by a high government official to recent comments by ecclesiastical dignitaries on Britain's economic plight.

These remarks have raised the question in pro-labor circles whether the Church of England is entering the political battle between Socialists and Conservatives.

The Labor government fired some of its biggest oratorical artillery tonight in defense of its policies. Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, running the gantlet of hecklers at suburban Woolwich, predicted Parliament will give final authorization this week to nationalization of iron and steel.

On foreign affairs, Bevin said the western powers have welded together nearly 60 percent of the world's population, "on a thoroughgoing peace basis." That, he said, "is a great triumph."

Shinwell, speaking at a Labor Party rally in Newcastle, berated Dr. Cyril F. Garbett, Archbishop of York, along with others who he said had made speeches recently "predicting dire events in the future."

The archbishop warned his diocesan conference November 8 that "ruin is unavoidable" unless British industry can produce more

'Tagged' Atom Tracks Pests, Tests Engines

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The Atomic Energy Commission yesterday reported on the phenomenally increased use of science's newest tool, the radioactive isotope, or "tagged" atom. As a detective, or "tracer," its sensitivity is a million times greater than ordinary chemical methods.

It is being used in Africa to follow the path of the yellow fever mosquito; in Australia to help combat the parasitical mistletoe that cuts down lumber production, and in the United States to study wear and tear of engines and to measure the thickness of paper, rubber and steel sheets.

Since the AEC began distributing isotopes a short three years ago, more than 1850 scientific papers reporting on the use of the tracers have been published, the AEC declared.

More than 300 universities, hospitals and laboratories in the United States are now using isotopes for research and medical diagnosis and treatment, the AEC's report showed. In addition, the radioactive tracers shipped from the AEC's Oak Ridge plant are being used in 21 foreign countries.

The use of the newest research utensil has mushroomed, the AEC noted. The number of shipments in the first six months of this year is more than double the number for the same period of 1948, and more than triple the 1947 figure. In all, more than 7000 shipments of radioisotopes have been made.

The radioactive atoms—variants of almost all the known elements—behave in chemical and mechanical reactions in exactly the same way as the normal, stable elements. But, being tagged, they can be detected in minute amounts. Thus they reveal themselves readily to

Sir William Slim To Visit U. S., British Reveal

London (Monday) Nov. 14 (AP).—The War Office said today Field Marshal Sir William Slim, chief of the imperial general staff, will visit the United States from November 26 to December 4. He will spend two days in Canada before that.

He will attend the Army-Navy football game in Philadelphia on November 26 and will visit Washington November 27 to 29.

'Waiting for Worshiper'

'Chauffeur' Roams Church, Loots Choir's Robing Room

A quiet man who posed as a chauffeur waiting for a worshiping family gave the congregation of Gunton Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church a rude shock yesterday.

He wandered unmolested through the church building during part of the Sunday school and the church services yesterday, then left, carrying a shopping bag.

When members of the choir came back to their robing room, four found their purses missing. And Tenth Precinct police couldn't find the man or the family he supposedly chauffeured.

John Hicks, the church sexton, told police the man said he was a chauffeur and sought a place inside to wait. Hicks said he directed the man to the basement.

Members of the congregation who were present at Sunday school and many who attended the worship service said they saw him wandering about. No one, apparently, paid any attention to him.

First choir member to discover her loss was Mrs. Roy H. Seeck, 4930 1st st. nw., who left the choir loft early. By the time services were finished, police had arrived.

The other losers were Miss Caroline M. Clark, 1917 S st. nw., Mrs. Bruce Rhoades, 427 Hampton ct., Falls Church, and Miss Catherine Harris, 319 Mount Pleasant st. nw.

Total money taken, police said, was $7.50 in the four purses, but glasses, keys, compacts, indentification cards and other articles were gone.

The man was described as a Negro; 5 feet 6 inches tall, about 135 pounds, wearing a beige gabardine topcoat, dark trousers and a gray hat. He had a gold tooth in the upper front of his mouth, the worshippers said.

Biggest Employer

U. S. Payroll Tops $10 Billion Or About $227 Per Taxpayer

By The Associated Press

Raises granted by Congress boosted the Federal payroll to a scheduled $10,200,000,000-plus for this fiscal year ending June 30, an Associated Press survey showed yesterday.

That figures out at about $227 for each Federal income taxpayer.

Government records disclose the payroll includes $3,574,000,000 in pay and allowances for uniformed members of the armed forces, and $6,640,000,000 for civilian workers.

The portion of the total payroll representing military expense actually runs up to 62 percent of the total, because the armed forces employ 925,000 or 47 percent of all "civilian workers."

The $10,200,000,000-plus which the Government is paying to its 3,692,000 soldiers, sailors, airmen and direct civilian employes accounts for a little less than one fourth of its $43,500,000,000 budget spending total.

But it makes the Federal Government easily the biggest single employer in the Nation, accounting for about 6 out of each 100 employed workers and about $8 of each $100 paid out in wages and salaries.

Government payroll costs are expected to go even higher in fiscal 1951, which begins next July 1. The recent raises will be in effect throughout that entire period. The current fiscal year was nearly one third gone before the raises were granted.

The raises, totaling about a half-billion dollars, were offset in part by congressional directions to "absorb" about two-thirds of that sum by economies. In most cases, this means cutting down the number of workers.

The military departments were ordered to "absorb" all of the 330-million-dollar raise voted for uniformed personnel—an order which may well have prompted the decision to release more than 25,000 draftees.

Only a small part of the approximately 170-million-dollar raise granted civilian workers—who got a 500-million-dollar raise last fiscal year—requires "absorption."

For example, the Budget Bureau, by direction of the President, has ordered departments and agencies to absorb the $1,250,000 raises given their 250 top executives unless they can prove that it would damage efficiency by doing so.

Most other added civilian per-

Truman Hopes Israel Will Get Point 4 Aid

San Francisco, Nov. 13 (AP).—President Truman today expressed hope America may give constructive assistance to Israel and other lands through his program for aid to underdeveloped areas.

In a message to the opening convention session of Hadassah, the women's Zionist organization of America, Mr. Truman said he hoped problems confronting Israel would be solved "quickly and amicably."

The message was read by Oscar L. Chapman, newly appointed Secretary of the Interior.

"I am also hopeful that our country may be able to extend constructive assistance to the peoples in Israel and the neighboring lands, through the effectuation of our program on behalf of the peoples of underdeveloped areas," President Truman said.

Chapman lauded President Truman's Point 4 program as one which "opens up vast new vistas of security and peace and well-being for mankind the world over."

The program, as announced by President Truman, envisions American help to "the free peoples of the world, through their own efforts, to produce more foods, more clothing, more materials for housing, and more mechanical power to lighten their burdens."

Chapman said Israel provided a demonstration of the meaning of the program—"a demonstration of what can be done in the underdeveloped areas of the world to promote the materials and physical well-being of the people and, more importantly, the dignity of man."

Technical aid, such as contemplated under the program, Chapman said, "is a necessary forerunner of large-scale development

Group Asks New Aid for Refugees In Palestine

Lake Success, Nov. 13 (AP).—An urgent appeal for extraordinary action to relieve the distress of Palestine refugees was addressed tonight to the United Nations.

It came from the American Friends Service Committee.

In a letter to Trygve Lie, U. N. secretary general, the Quaker group chairman, Henry Cadbury, and its Executive Secretary Clarence Pickett pleaded that political beliefs be subordinated "in a new concerted effort to find a way out based solely on humanitarian grounds."

Contradictions Confuse Probe Of Air Crash

Civil Aeronautics Board investigators today will renew their attempt to untangle a mass of contradictory testimony when they resume hearings on the Nation's worst airplane disaster.

Their efforts to determine just what happened when a P-38 fighter plane, flown by Bolivian Erick Rios Bridoux, and an Eastern Air Lines DC-4 crashed November 1 near National Airport has thus far been complicated by a wide range of disagreement among witnesses.

It was indicated Saturday, when the probe recessed after five days of admittedly confusing statements, that tower operators at National Airport will be recalled to review previous testimony.

One of the most mysterious clashes in the hearings has been Bridoux's contention he was misled by a "third airplane" when he descended—some say he was "diving"—toward the airport for a landing.

The 30-year-old Director of Bolivian Civil Aeronautics told the five-man panel, in a deposition taken at his hospital bedside in Alexandria, that he saw an airplane "touching the ground" as he approached. He assumed that plane was "No. 1" to land, since he had been told he was "No. 2."

Tower operators have testified Bridoux was told he was "No. 2" to land after an Eastern DC-4. He was instructed to make a 360-de-

Israel Wants U. S. To Teach Officers; Americans Cool

Tel Aviv, Nov. 13 (NYHT).—The Israeli army has had applications on file with the United States Defense Establishment for several months for its ground, air force and general staff officers to attend American military schools, it became known today.

If the applications are approved the entire instructor staff of the Israeli army would be American-trained within a few years, but so far the requests have not even been acknowledged. As a result, Israel army leaders are turning to western European nations for schooling—and with much greater success.

For some time the United States Army reportedly has not been satisfied with the amount of military information made available to its representatives here. This may be behind the present situation.

Barkley Plane Barely Misses Blimp Flying Over Pentagon

A plane carrying Vice President Alben Barkley came within 50 feet of colliding with a blimp over the Pentagon Thursday night, Bolling Air Force Base officials disclosed last night.

Crew members of the plane reported there were no lights visible until "we were over the blimp when it lit up all over." The operator of the blimp, however, declared his lights were "blinking all the time."

Barkley's plane, flying at 1000 feet, was near a landing at National Airport on a flight from Paducah, Ky. It was a special mission B-17, operated by the headquarters command of the Air Force.

The incident occurred at 8:23 p. m., just 1 mile from the spot where 55 persons were killed on November 1 when a P-38 fighter collided with an Eastern Air Lines DC-4.

Barkley did not see the incident, Bolling officials said, although the converted bomber passed so near the top of the blimp that crew members reported seeing exhaust flashes reflected from the skin of the gas bag. Barkley learned about the incident some time later.

The plane's pilot, Capt. William R. Humrichouse, 33, of 2966 2d st. se., also was unaware of the near accident until after the plane landed at National Airport.

After being told by crew members of the near miss, he reported the incident to Civil Aeronautics Administration officials in the airport control tower.

CAA officials said an investigation would begin today. They said they did not know the identity of the blimp, although a lighter-than-air craft, operated by the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. for ad-

4 Stationed Here Are Hurt Slightly As B-25 Overturns

Columbia, Mo., Nov. 13 (AP).—An Air Force B-25 overturned and burned after undershooting the runway at the airport here today, but its four occupants were injured only slightly.

The three crewmen and a passenger got out through an escape hatch before an exploding gasoline tank set flames sweeping over the ship. It was destroyed.

[Bolling Air Base officials named them as: Maj. Dale W. Luehring, 31, of 417 S. Abingdon st., Arlington, pilot; Capt. W. G. Pace, 29, 1206 Mt. Vernon blvd., Alexandria, copilot; S/Sergt. John Curl, 4574 Blue Plains dr. sw., and Lieut. Col. Herbert L. Gullickson, the passenger, a Dental Corps officer stationed at Walter Reed Hospital.]

The plane was on a routine flight from Fort Leavenworth, Kans., to its base at Bolling Field, Washington. The crash occurred as the craft started to land here to take on another passenger.

U. S., Business Urged To Join Homes Effort

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Development in the United States of a system of joint participation by Government and private enterprise in home financing may be the solution of the "middle-income" housing problem, Senator Sparkman (D., Ala.) said yesterday.

Sparkman, chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Housing, has just returned from a study of housing in England, Norway, Denmark, Sweden, Holland and France.

Author of the "middle-income" housing bill introduced during the last session, Sparkman said the continental study will furnish new ideas for housing legislation during the next session.

The subcommittee chairman predicted this year's home building probably will break all records in the United States.

As a logical corollary, Sparkman pointed out, there will be no extension of Federal rent control after the present law expires June 30, 1950.

Sparkman said that in supporting Federal rent control during this session he had said he did not believe extension would be necessary except in the event of impending war. Local controls probably will still be necessary, he added, in places like Washington, Chicago, New York, Connecticut and California.

Sweden, Sparkman said, impressed the Congressmen as having best solved its housing problems.

He said a system had been worked out by which private enterprise handled the first mortgage of 60 percent of the value of the property at 3 percent interest, and then financed a second mortgage of 10 percent more at 4 percent interest.

The Government then takes over with a third mortgage of 20 percent at 2¼ percent interest.

n some cases, if the individual cannot finance the remaining 10 percent, the Government makes a fourth loan or even a subsidy.

Sparkman said he mentioned this not because he believed an identical system could be used here, but because he thought the principle of joint participation could be ultilized.

Undaunted by failure of the middle-income housing bill to win consideration in the last session, Sparkman said the committee would return to the question when Congress reconvenes in January.

The subcommittee will have before it ideas gleaned from the various European countries by its members and the staff.

1942 Bonds Redeemable 2 Years Early

By The Associated Press

The Treasury announced yesterday it would redeem $1,962,687,300 in seven-year-old bonds next March 15, two years before their maturity date.

The call for re emption covers the entire outstanding issue of 2 percent Treasury bonds of 1950-52, issued October 19, 1942, and due to mature March 15, 1952.

Since the Government is overspending its income now and running a deficit, it will handle the redemption by offering new securities in exchange to holders of these bonds, or by selling new securities to raise cash for the payoff.

Financial circles have been speculating that the new securities would be notes bearing an interest rate below that of the redeemed bonds—possibly 1⅛ percent a year.

On the present debt of more than $256,500,000,000, which may climb another two billion dollars by next June 30, the Treasury is paying an interest charge of more than $5,500,000,000 a year.

The bond call was issued well in advance because terms of the issue require the Treasury to give holders at least four months' advance notice of a redemption ahead of maturity.

The Treasury, without a surplus it can use to pay off maturing securities outright, must refinance nearly five billion dollars in securities due for redemption December 15.

Lost Radium Vial Sought in City Dump

Moline, Ill., Nov. 13 (U.P.).—A bulldozer tore up a city dump today and a search with a gieger counter began in a unique "scavenger hunt" for a lead-sheathed vial of radium.

Dr. N. C. Barwasser said the radium disappeared from his office last Thursday and he believes it is buried under refuse at the 41st st. dump. It is valued at around $800.

U. S. Payroll Tops 10 Billion

sonnel costs are rated technically to be "adjustments" in pay which will result from "reclassifications" rather than an outright raise.

That holds for 77 million dollars in extra money to go to the Postoffice's 480,000 employes and 90 million dollars to be shared by the other civilian workers.

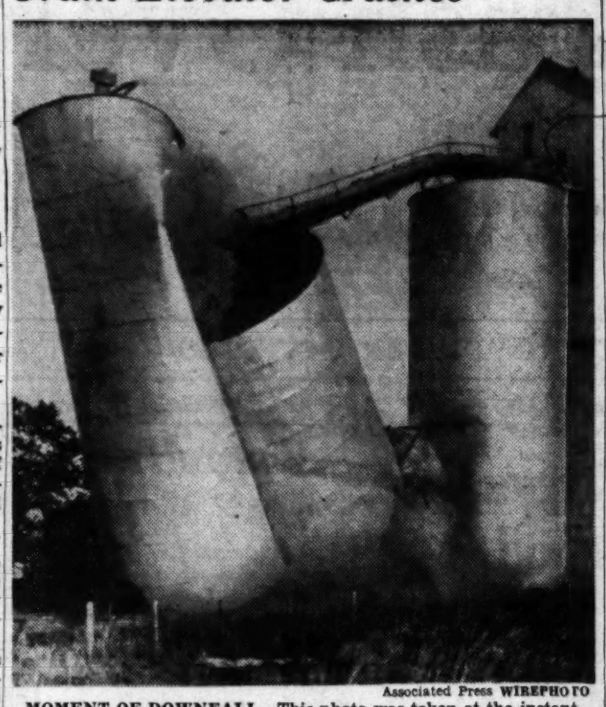
Government records reviewed in the survey show the Postoffice Department, which has employes in practically every community in the Nation—and which operates at a loss—ranks next to the Military Department in employe numbers and costs.

The postoffice payroll totals $1,560,000,000 a year for some 480,000 employes. Behind the postoffice is the Veterans Administration, with 180,000 employes drawing 575 million dollars pay.

The remaining agencies—apart from the military establishment, which pays $2,780,000,000 to its 925,000 civilian workers—have altogether 500,000 employes and a $1,725,000,000 payroll.

The $10,200,000,000 military and civilian payroll does not include billions of dollars which the Government pays to people indirectly or directly in such items as pensions, veterans' schooling allowances, farm price supports, etc.

Grain Elevator Crashes



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

McCabe Favors Keeping Price Of Gold Exactly Where It Is

By The Associated Press

Chairman Thomas B. McCabe of the Federal Reserve Board spoke out sharply last night against any idea of circulating gold coins here or altering the price of gold.

He gave his views to a Congressional committee which sent him a long questionnaire including these subjects as part of a broad study of monetary, credit and financial policies.

Use of gold coins has been forbidden in this country since President Roosevelt in 1934 raised the paper money price of gold from $20.67 an ounce to $35. McCabe said restoring gold coin circulation would bring "serious disadvantages."

He opposed changing, up or down, the $35 gold quotation. He also said a price raise would help Russia, a gold mining country, but hurt many friendly nations.

McCabe's emphatic stand completed a solid-front lineup of chief Government officials against any devaluation of the dollar through a further raise in the paper money price of gold.

President Truman told a news conference flatly last week that there will be no change in the gold price as long as he is President.

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder had said earlier that Congress alone has power to change the gold price, or to provide for circulation of gold coins, and that he had no intentions of asking for Congressional action.

The authority under which Mr. Roosevelt acted has expired.

As to gold coin circulation, McCabe said "the long-run effect would be to weaken rather than to strengthen confidence in the dollar."

Reserve Unit Asks Powers

the corporation's principal objective should be to provide needed financial assistance to small businesses in those exceptional circumstances in which regular credit facilities, including those of the Reserve banks, are inadequate."

With those qualifications, McCabe added, "there is ample room" for action by both RFC and the Reserve banks provided their activities "are coordinated with national credit policies and are not exercised in competition with private financing institutions."

Dissolution Sought

New York, Nov. 13 (U.P.). — The American Jewish Congress today urged the dissolution of the United Nations Palestine Conciliation Commission because of the commission's "failure" to bring about direct negotiations between Jews and Arabs.

Brannan Still in There Pitching for His Farm Program

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan is still battling for his long-range farm program, commonly know as the Brannan Plan.

At several important agriculture meetings since Congress adjourned with passage of a last-minute compromise farm law, Brannan has served notice that his plan is not and will not be scuttled without a hearing.

In anticipation of the fight, he emphasizes at each meeting the weaknesses he sees in the new farm act. He minces no words in finding it far from adequate, and unfair to both the farmer and the housewife.

Two Important Meetings

Two of the most important meetings have been:

1. The "Agriculture Outlook" dinner. This is the windup of the annual week-long meeting of the Government's agricultural economists, statisticians, home economists and field workers from all the States. The sessions plan and set up the department's program for the coming year.

2. The meeting of the National Cooperative Milk Producers Federation in New York last week.

To the dairymen, Brannan brought home the effects of the price support law on their industry. Because of it, he said, "the Government has accumulated almost 100 million pounds of butter" which are now overhanging the market.

"Already," he emphasized, "we have a tremendous disposal problem."

Brannan indicated that he will again present his plan, perhaps with a few specifications, to Congress soon after it reconvenes in January. Like many others in Congress and out, he doesn't believe that the hodge-podge conference bill will go through the next session without change, any more than the similar Hope-Aiken bill lasted more than one year.

Cash Subsidy Involved

(The Brannan Plan differs from the present price support plan as follows: Instead of buying up farm commodities in order to maintain high price for the farmer, the Government would let each commodity find its own level, and make up the difference between that and a fair return to the farmer through cash subsidy. These subsidies would be called "production payments." Brannan claims for his plan that it would protect the farmer and give the consumer the benefit of any lower price due to high production.)

First of all, the diehards for rigid 90 percent supports for the misnamed "basic" commodities will undoubtedly attempt to postpone a tryout of a sliding scale on January 1, 1951, just as they successfully fought a tryout of the Aiken plan with its schedule of variable supports in the last session.

Secondly, Chairman Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) of the Senate Agriculture Committee, promised to start hearings on the Brannan bill after January 1. Thomas accused a subcommittee of ignoring the Brannan plan last year—hearings ended in the Anderson compromise which was itself lost in the Senate-House conference compromise.

Up for Reelection

Thomas is reported later to have promised to forget about the Brannan plan in return for concessions in the conference bill. But Thomas is up for reelection next year. His is a wheat State. Wheat planters are the most vociferous in demands for a high level of price support. And there is going to be a lot of pressure on Thomas from other sources—from the almost forgotten consumer, for instance—for consideration of Brannan's proposal.

Before the Agriculture Outlook group, Brannan emphasized that his hearers, as Government employes, are "not expected to crusade for the Administration program." He said, though, that he wanted them "fully informed."

He then added that agricultural workers, either in Washington or out in the field, should "not be obligated to follow the line of an organization fighting the Administration."

This was taken as a declaration of war on the American Farm Bureau Federation and its President Allan B. Kline. Kline and Brannan don't see eye to eye on many subjects, particularly on price supports and the Brannan plan.

Bureau Is Influential

Kline is the most prominent advocate of a low, sliding scale of price supports. He can't see the Brannan proposal for "production payments" at all. However, the bureau wields a lot of influence in departmental affairs, having placed many of the men in the chief jobs over the years. They are particularly strong in the extension service. In some States, such as Iowa, the bureau has been partly supported by tax funds.

In explaining how he arrived at the recommendations he made to Congress, Brannan told his coworkers that his starting point was the belief that "the Nation must live harmoniously with the increased abundance which agriculture is producing."

To accomplish this, he said, "price supports must help to keep abundant production profitable to farmers and fully useful to consumers. They must ease rather than worsen the problem of surpluses. They must help to prevent depressions which can get started as farm prices drop out of line with the trends of other prices."

Points to Milk Situation

He added that a price support program effective enough to be an economic balance wheel should cover the major farm commodities, including perishables. He then declared that he has not yet seen a way of supporting perishables except the production payment method.

Before the milk producers, Brannan sounded the same note. He pointed out that the present method of price supports, instead of increasing the consumption of milk, was pricing it out of many homes.

Brannan then drove home his chief argument:

"We know the tremendous capacity and need for the American people for milk and dairy products. Does it serve the needs of either consumers or producers when we have to take great quantities of butter and other dairy products off the market?

"How long will the American people submit to continued accumulations of butter and cheese while supporting dairy products at 90 percent—or even 75 percent—of the modernized parity?"

Brannan Would Back Better Plan, He Says

By the United Press

Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan said yesterday that if Congress can come up with a "better" farm plan than his, the Administration will give it wholehearted support.

But he made it plain that he doesn't believe the new price support law passed this year will be much more than a stopgap measure.

Brannan discussed farm legislation with Senator Francis J. Myers of Pennsylvania, Senate Democratic whip, in a transcribed radio broadcast.

Myers conceded that the new law is a "compromise" that no one is "completely satisfied with." But he contended it is a "pretty good bill" for bridging the gap until Congress has had time to work out a "practical, long-range, enduring solution."

U. S. Foreign Aid Reaches 80 Billions

By Robert S. Allen

Since July 1, 1940, the United States has given the stupendous total of 80 billion dollars in grants, loans and credits to foreign countries.

This is at an estimated rate of $533.34 for every man, woman and child in the country.

These and other revealing figures are contained in a Government report being compiled on foreign spending. Included are appropriations voted by the recent Congress for ECA and arms aid to Europe.

31 Billions Since 1945

Of the 80 billion dollars, more than 31 billion dollars has been ladeled out during the postwar period, beginning July 1, 1945. This is approximately three fifths of the amount spent for this purpose prior to that date. Also, it averages more than six billion dollars a year—a sum greater than any other single Federal outlay except for the three military services.

Largest beneficiaries are the United Kingdom, including Canada, Australia and New Zealand, Russia, France and China. Their "take" is as follows:

United Kingdom—$36,362,000,000, of which more than $31,220,000,000 has been in outright grants.

Russia—$11,248,000,000, of which $11,026,000,000 was in outright grants.

France—$5,895,000,000, of which $3,775,000,000 is in grants and $2,120,000,000 in credits.

China—$3,112,000,000, of which $2,765,000,000 was in grants.

Axis Powers Aided

The three defeated Axis powers are the next largest recipients as follows:

Germany—$2,041,000,000 in grants and 126 million dollars in credits; Italy—$2,027,000,000 of which $1,647,000,000 has been in grants; Japan—$1,464,000,000 of which 240 million dollars has been credits.

San Diego, Calif., Nov. 13 (AP).—The "Firebird," a rocket-powered target-seeking missile with a proximity fuse for launching from one plane against another has been developed experimentally for the Air Force.

The Ryan Aeronautical Co. announced this today after flight tests with the missile, first of its kind for the Air Force.

The "Firebird," also known as the XAAM-A-1, is small enough to permit a jet fighter to carry several. It is intended for use against an enemy plane hidden by darkness or clouds.

Can Be Hung On Racks

The "Firebird" was described as a little over six inches in diameter and about 10 feet long. It can be hung on ordinary external bomb racks.

Upon launching, a booster rocket gives the missile a push to its high cruising speed. This 30-inch booster is then blown off, and rocket motors in the missile take over for flight to the target.

The missile has electronic equipment for locating its victim and for guiding its flight to at least a near collision. The proximity fuse, developed during the war, will detonate the missile's explosive charge on approaching the target.

Tested in Flight

Ryan said the "Firebird" has been tested in flight, without its explosive charge or guiding mechanism, at Holloman Air Base, Alamogordo, N. Mex. Development cost was two million dollars.

Ryan said the missile is still experimental and not in production. It will be capable of making maneuvers much sharper than are possible by a piloted aircraft, Ryan said.

The "Firebird" has four wings spanning three feet which which form an "X" across the center section, and four control fins.

Designed to be launched by a mother fighter plane in the direction of enemy aircraft which the piloted plane has tracked by radar, the new missile pursues its target regardless of visibility or inclement weather

Hiss, Coplon, Gubitchev Trials Will Start This Week in N. Y.

New York, Nov. 13 (AP).—The trials of Alger Hiss and of Judith Coplon and Valentin Gubitchev, both involving alleged efforts of Russian spies to get United States secrets, are scheduled to begin this week.

It will be the second trial each for Hiss, one-time high-ranking State Department official, and for Miss Coplon, former United States Justice Department employe.

Both will be held in the Federal courthouse in lower Manhattan where 11 United States Communist Party leaders were convicted last month on conspiracy charges.

The trial of Miss Coplon and Gubitchev, the Russian engineer she said she once loved, is to begin Monday. Gubitchev, a suspended United Nations employe, was not a defendant in her first trial in Washington last spring.

The Hiss case is set for next Thursday.

Crommelin Criticizes Rebuke

By the United Press

Capt. John G. Crommelin, jr., said last night he agreed with a radio commentator who charged the public reprimand given him last week for his part in the unification row was a "breach of Navy regulations."

In his regular Sunday night radio broadcast, Walter Winchell said that Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, new Chief of Naval Operations, violated three sections of Navy regulations in issuing a public reprimand to Crobmelin.

Winchell identified the articles as 23, 24 and 25 of "Naval Courts and Boards." They provide courts-martial may order a public reprimand, but that a commanding officer, such as Sherman, cannot go further than a private reprimand. Crommelin was not court-martialed.

In his letter of reprimand, Sherman told Crommelin he had violated regulations in making public letters bearing a "confidential" label. The letters dealt with the unification fight.

Questioned about the Winchell broadcast, Crommelin said:

"My attorneys and I agree with him (Winchell)."

The articles mentioned by the radio commentator provide that all offenses committed by Navy personnel on shore shall be punished in the same manner as if they had occurred at sea.

Article 24 says "no commander of a vessel shall inflict upon an officer any other punishment than private reprimand, suspension from duty, arrest or confinement."

It provides also that such punishment "should not continue longer than 10 days unless the time necessary to bring the officer to trial by court-martial is longer.

Crommelin pointed out that his recent suspension from duty and confinement to the District of Columbia lasted 33 days.

Mile Radius From A-Blast Called Deadly

By the United Press

An atomic energy expert yesterday challenged a naval officer's statement that an A-bomb explosion would not seriously injure a person standing about a mile away.

Dr. George M. Lyon, a member of the National Research Council's committee on atomic casualties and the chief Navy safety officer at the Bikini A-bomb tests, said that almost everyone within a mile of a bomb blast would be killed.

He made the statement in a radio interview with the Gannett News Service.

During the recent House Armed Services Committee hearings on unification, Comdr. Eugene Tatom, a Navy ordnance expert, testified a person would escape "serious injury" if he stood in the open at one end of Washington National Airport's 6840-foot runway while an A-bomb exploded at the other end.

That claim, Lyon said, "is not true."

"Few people who at the time of the explosion were exposed in the open within a radius of one mile would escape without serious injury," he said. "There would be nearly 100 percent fatalities within this radius."

Furthermore, Lyon said, "between one and two miles, there would be many serious injuries."

"Between two and three miles, there might be many injuries, but most of them would not be serious. Beyond three miles there would be few injuries."

He said the greatest danger would come from the tremendous blast and terrific heat unleashed by explosion. The effects of radiation, he said, would take far fewer lives.

Isotopes Used for Tracing Many Things a researcher and give him a clew to the nature of the process being studied.

They are being used, the AEC reported, in the most fundamental studies of plants—to learn the process of photosynthesis. This is the making of food, by the action of sunshine and chlorophyl in the plant, from air and water.

"If nature's method of food production can be fully revealed," the report declares in a masterpiece of understatement, "it is not unreasonable to think that the world's food supply may be improved."

Investigators have already uncovered many of the preliminary compounds which the plant manufactures in the process of creating sugar and starch.

Industrial laboratories are using isotopes to study friction of various metals, the flow of oil through refinery pipelines and the testing of welds and castings.

In experiments in Nigeria, British West Africa, mosquito larvae were grown in a medium containing radiostrontium, traces of which the mosquito absorbed.

The insects were found to remain radioactive throughout their lives, and their flights and movements could be readily traced. This gave indication of how far yellow fever, carried by the mosquito, could spread from the source of the infection.

The AEC's report, giving the complete bibliography of the 1850 isotope studies, and a listing of the researchers, is available at the Government Printing Office.

On-the-Spot Report

U.S. Can't Risk Letting Britain Isolate Herself in Own Bloc

(Last of a Series)

By J. A. Livingston

The cartoon symbols are out of date. That husky, four-square fellow who looks as if he had gout from living on too high an income shouldn't be John Bull any longer. He ought to be labeled Uncle Sam. And that lanky Yankee, who looks as if he never stopped working or driving a David Harum bargain, should be rechristened John Bull.

Two wars, during which the United States gained and Britain lost industrial prowess, plus more than 50 years of industrial decline in Britain and advance in the United States have made the United States the world's great creditor country. Britain, once the richest nation in the world, barely rakes out a return on dwindling foreign assets.

John Bull's problem is that of a once-wealthy man. He has too many commitments he refuses to cast off. He's trying to hold an empire together. He's trying to pay debts he can't afford. He's undertaking military obligations bigger relatively than those of the United States. And finally he's trying to manage a social revolution.

Lists Five-Point Plan

To solve his financial and economic crisis, John must start retrenching, as follows:

1. Reduce payments of debts to India, Pakistan and other sterling area and empire countries. These debts amount to three billion pounds ($8,400,000,000), and payments have been running at the annual rate of 200 million pounds ($560,000,000). These payments constitute shipments of goods and materials, but Britain gets only a scratch of the pen—a reduction in debt—in return. Therefore they're called "unrequited exports."

2. Cut down military undertakings, as in Greece. In 1947 Britain, with only a third of America's population, had half as many persons as the United States in the armed services. Defense expenditures amount to 7.6 percent of the national income. In the United States, defense equals only 6.4 percent (excluding international aid.)

3. Curb the social revolution. John will argue that. He'll say it has been long overdue. But . . . a third of every dollar of Britain's national income passes through the government. That's a big tax take. And national services, like pensions, health benefits, unemployment compensation, allowances to families with young children take 16 percent of the budget, ranking second to defense (23 percent). A lot of this amounts to taking away from the well-to-do and redistributing to the not-so-well-to-do.

Would Relax Controls

By deferring social benefits, Britain could release manpower and materials now used to build new schools, hospitals, housing, etc., to rehabilitate her industrial plant. That would serve, in turn, to increase the country's capacity to export, which would help meet the dollar deficit.

4. Relax controls over production and distribution. This can't be done while scarcity dominates the economy. But if John reduces the nation's overhead and frees labor for production, then gradually the supply of goods and services will catch up with demand. And the need for rationing, price control, allocations, permits and other regulations will disappear. This is a several-year project.

5. Go in for more austerity. To this end, prices of goods for domestic consumption—food, clothing, etc.—must be permitted to rise. Not only would that cut domestic buying, but it would bring the British price level into line with the world price level. That would pave the way, ultimately, for relaxing exchange controls, for freeing the pound.

Thus, before John Bull again can become a great power in the world, he must first become a lesser one.

John Bull's economic crisis is also America's crisis. The United States has been a big export nation. But the United States cannot continue to sell unless it steps up what it buys, just as Britain cannot continue to buy unless it learns to sell more.

Britain's role of the nineteenth century now is open to the United States: to act the part of the creditor nation. And America's self-interest in the postwar world suggests a politico-economic program as follows:

Stockpiling Suggested

1. To increase purchases of foreign commodities and merchandise, eliminate tariffs and simplify customs procedures to encourage foreign sellers in the United States market. An industrially advanced nation does not need to protect established industries from competition with less-developed, less-mechanized industries abroad.

2. To stockpile raw materials, like rubber and tin, thus increasing the supply of dollars in foreign hands. At the same time, the United States ought to weigh the world's dollar needs against domestic economic policies. For instance: should the Government operate a large merchant marine and synthetic rubber plants? Such undertakings, by reducing United States purchases of shipping services or natural rubber, deprive our customers, our allies, of dollars. The justification heretofore has been that such operations are required for defense.

3. To shoulder some of John Bull's burdens as he drops them, as we did in Greece. If the British ultimately felt compelled to cut down military expenditures, say, in Germany, or Malta, or Hongkong or Singapore, or other strategic outposts, presumably the United States would have to take over. If the British were to cease financial aid—unrequited exports—to India and Pakistan, presumably the United States would have to see that the economies of those countries were not undermined.

4. To carry on with President Truman's Point 4 program to extend financial and technical assistance to underdeveloped countries. That has the double effect of making dollars available, and lifting the standards of living of people throughout the world—one of the greatest protections this country has against the spread of Soviet power.

5. Above all, the United States must keep prosperous. An American depression, by cutting off the demand for goods by this country, would send the economies of Britain, France, Belgium and most other nations into a tailspin, and it would substantiate the persistent Soviet indictment of United States capitalism—that it's unstable.

Program Would Be Costly

As a corollary, any great upsurge in the American standard of living, of consumption, would prove to be economic salvation of the non-Soviet world. If the United States national income were to expand a third from current levels of 225 billion dollars to 300 billion dollars—in line with President Truman's predictions—American imports would go up. So would American tourist expenditures. And so, presumably, would United States foreign investments.

Such an international program is bound to cost money. But it's inescapable. This country's resources are so great, its industrial skill so enormous that other nations cannot—at present—trade on equal terms. If other nations are unable to get dollars, they'll be forced into trading blocs of their own—Britain, into the sterling area, for instance. And this country would be isolated economically and politically.

In a tense atomic-bomb world, confronted by an aggressive Soviet Russia, that's something the United States cannot risk.

Thomas Stirs Swedish Ire

Thomas did not find "the extreme reverence which he deems due an American Senator. That is really too bad for the Senator, whose complexes seem to be unusually well developed."

Referring to Thomas' remarks that in the country he was criticizing anyone in a military uniform is a spy and that the nation had "grabbed" some easy money, Stockholms-Tidningen said:

"To this every wede answers calmly and clearly: You are a boor and liar, Mr. Senator. And we seriously await the measures which might be expected from sensible and responsible American quarters."

Expressen, Liberal afternoon paper, said that although Thomas is a Senator, his remarks are nothing to bother about. The United States Senate, it added, "is certainly a high assembly but is also a dumping place for all sorts of quaint characters and the most ignorant country politicians from the darkest corners of the Union. And it must be pretty dark in Oklahoma.

"The Senator talks rubbish and will probably continue to do so. But, of course, it must be said outright so it can be heard in sensible and responsible quarters in the United States that the good will of the United States in Europe does not profit by emissaries like the gentleman from Oklahoma. His tone is not appropriate in better places. It might complicate the relations between the democracies through quite unnecessary misunderstandings."

Presidents of 15 Synagogues Are Honored

By Gene Jones—The Washington Post

COMMUNITY SERVICE—Presidents of 15 synagogues affiliated with the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, Seaboard Region, are honored for service to their community at a luncheon-meeting Sunday in the Adas Israel Congregation Synagogue at 600 I st. nw. Among the presidents, or their representatives receiving the citations from Judge Joseph Sherbow (extreme left) of the Supreme Court of Baltimore, are (left to right) Isaac Jacobson, vice president of the host congregation; Abraham H. Maller, president, B'nai Jacob, Washington; C. Edward Goldberg, president, Arlington Jewish Center; James E. Linde, treasurer, Agudas Achim, Alexandria, and M. I. Speert, Baltimore, chairman of Seaboard Region, which includes 20 congregations in the District, Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina. The meeting concluded a three-day conference at Adas Israel

Synagogue Never Will Become Obsolete, New York Rabbi Says

"The synagogue is the only institution whose program for American Judaism is not obsolete," Dr. Ben Zion Bokser, rabbi of Forest Hills Jewish Center in New York, said yesterday.

Speaking at a final session of a three-day meeting of representatives of synagogues affiliated with the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, Seaboard Region, Sunday in Adas Israel Synagogue, 600 I st. nw, he said that while the need for other organizations may become obsolete the synagogue's place is everlasting.

For the individual "to obtain peace of mind he must live a religious life," he said.

The conference, attended by about 75 persons representing 20 congregations in the District, Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina adopted a $98,000 quota to be raised before June 30 for the Jewish Theological Seminary.

Plans for an educational conference were also discussed at a meeting of the board of overseers in the morning.

Wherry Predicts Fair Deal Defeat In 1950 Elections

By The Associated Press

By taking issue with President Truman, Senate Republican Leader Wherry predicted today that the people will turn thumbs down on the Chief Executive's "Fair Deal" program in the 1950 congressional elections.

The Nebraska lawmaker also disputed Mr. Truman's assertion that the Democrats' victories at the polls last week will make it easier to get the party's 1948 platform pledges enacted into law.

"Neither the Democrats' success in the New York senatorial race nor the Republican victory in the New Jersey governorship election are conclusive of anything, so far as next year's congressional elections are concerned," Wherry said in an interview.

"I have been on a swing around a good part of the country in the last few weeks and I can tell you that the people are beginning to wake up to just what this welfare state program of the administration's means."

Great Britain will accrue to the United States as well as to Europe and underdeveloped areas by effectuation of the program, Chapman said. The United States, he said, needs the raw materials underdeveloped areas can supply. Those areas, in turn, need the machines, tools and fertilizers produced in industrial countries.

Reds' Peace Demand To Stir U. N. Debate

Lake Success, Nov. 13 (AP).—Russia's charges that the United States and Britain are warmongers will set off sharp debate in the United Nations Monday.

The political committee expects a two-hour oration by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky to support his accusations.

Vishinsky's charge is the preface to a demand that the U. N. outlaw atomic weapons and other means of mass destruction, and that Big Five members of the Security Council—Britain, the United States, France, China and Russia—sign "a pact for the strengthening of peace."

An immediate answer is promised by Warren Austin, United States delegate. He is completing tonight a half-hour statement which is forecast as a pointed reply to the Russian spokesman.

United States and British delegations also were working tonight to complete their joint resolution, countering the Soviet demands. It is understood that through it and the Austin statement will run this thread: Every provision for peace and cooperation now exists in the United Nations Charter. If these provisions are obeyed, no further pact is necessary. If these provisions are not to be obeyed, any further pact would be a fraud.

The debate opens Monday morning at about the same time the special political committee begins voting on proposals to control atomic energy.

Certain to be adopted is a joint French-Canadian proposal asking the permanent members of the Atomic Energy Commission—the Big Five plus Canada—to continue present talks in an attempt to get an agreement.

Separate study of the peacetime uses of atomic energy was urged tonight by Clark M. Eichelberger, director of the American Association for the United Nations, as one path to breaking the atomic deadlock.

The association is a member of a World Federation of Citizens Groups which support United Nations aims.

Red Sub Base Reported Off Boot of Italy

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—A Russian submarine base is in operation on the island of Saseno where the Adriatic and Mediterranean Seas meet off the boot of Italy, Western intelligence reports said tonight.

Trustworthy sources in Rome, Athens and Belgrade were said to have confirmed the reports of Albanian refugees who several months ago said the Soviets were constructing a large naval base on the strategic island in Albania's, Valona Bay, informants said.

More recent reports told of Russian submariners in the streets of Valona, and of underseas Soviet craft arriving at the former Italian base on the island.

Reds May Free Foes From Prison

Berlin, Nov. 13 (AP).—An official of the Communist-led East German Republic was quoted tonight as saying Russia plans to close her prison camps in Germany and turn all political prisoners over to the East German state.

East Berlin Democrats, in contact with their party's annual conference at Leipzig, said Helmut Brandt, East German Secretary of State, made the announcement at a party rally.

They said Brandt did not say when the plan would be carried out and gave no details.

The Russians maintain prison camps in eastern Germany at the sites of former Nazi concentration camps. Inmates include prisoners of war sentenced to long terms for mass shooting of Russians during the war.

Last month the British-licensed Social Democrat said the Russians were holding 33,000 prisoners in three big camps.

Salazar Wins As Portuguese Vote Quietly

Lisbon, Portugal, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—Only a handful of opposition party voters cast their ballots against the government party of Premier Antonio de Oliviera Salazar today as Portugal peacefully elected a new national 120-man Assembly.

Salazar's National Union Party was unchallenged in 28 of Portugal's 30 electoral districts.

Official results will not be announced until November 20.

Predictions of a heavy opposition vote from Castello Branco and Portalegre, near the Spanish border, the only two electoral districts where the government party was challenged, were offset by early unofficial returns from Monfort city, near Castello Branco. There the opposition polled only 39 votes to the Nat'l Union's 700.

The new Assembly, which will serve a four-year term, is expected to alter the national constitution and possibly provide for a new executive under which President Antonio de Fragoso Carmona would reign and Salazar would fill the dual role of President and Premier.

goods cheaper to sell overseas. He called on the government to "make the facts known to all" on the economic crisis. He added that leaders of all political parties should join in a statement on the "extreme gravity" of Britain's plight.

Shinwell called the archbishop's speech "a most deplorable example."

"I have great respect for Dr. Garbett as a high church dignitary," he said, "but I decline to follow that gentleman, however exalted, when he embarks on a disquisition relating either to economic or political policy.

"Should Learn Real Facts"

"It might do infinite good, to put it mildly, if gentlemen like Dr. Garbett—and there are others—endeavored to ascertain the real facts of the situation before they embark on criticism of the government or venture into the field of public opinion."

Dr. Geoffrey Fisher, Archbishop of Canterbury and Primate of all England, has referred to the forthcoming general election as a "gathering shadow." He told the synod of the convocation of Canterbury there is a "need for united effort to overcome our economic plight." Several Anglican bishops have expressed concern over the economy.

Bevin, painting a picture of gathering strength among the Western democracies, said:

"The task now before us is to remain strong—and this is where I am against those who would upset national service or not make proper provision for defense—but never aggressive, because weakness may be a temptation."

Hecklers Pitch Into Him

The Foreign Secretary was warmly applauded in his remarks on foreign affairs, but hecklers gave him a rough time during the defense of labor's domestic policies.

He was asked where Britain would stand if America nationalized its factories and ran them at a loss.

"I am not certain," he replied, "but I think America at the moment has a budget deficit in spite of her wealth."

"Yet they are lending us money," a voice called.

"We held the fort from 1940 . . ." Bevin answered, but his words were drowned out with shouts of "Churchill, Churchill!"

"It's all very well to shout 'Churchill,'" he retorted, "but it was not a one-man war. I don't decry what anybody did in the war, but I am not going to have it said all of us didn't do our part. And I did mine."

May Clamp Down on Mart

Hugh Dalton, former Chancellor of the Exchequer, hinted the Labor government is planning sharper control of the London stock exchange. In a speech at Hull, he said:

"We will have to consider how this service may be brought into closer accord with national interests. Meanwhile, I am anxious that these unpatriotic operations (of financial speculators) should be widely understood by decent people all over the country because we shall have to find our remedies in due course."

One of the big questions with which the Labor Government will have to come to grips is whether the British working-man will keep on agreeing not to ask for more pay in the face of steadily rising prices.

Leaders of the Trade Union Congress (TUC) and Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer, will call on Bevin Monday for his advice on a new union policy. Prices of most things are climbing. TUC has indicated it will recommend tight restraint on demands for higher wages by its eight million members. This policy is considered an economic necessity to hold down both internal inflation and the prices of goods Britain must export to survive.

Bevin Reviews Foreign Policy, Sees Hope Yet

London, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, reviewing 4½ years of British foreign policy, said tonight that although Russian hostility makes "things look black at times, I have never lost faith yet . . . we shall win through."

Bevin said, "Generations as yet unborn will pay the price if a mistake is made" in British foreign policy.

Bevin said he thought the policy Britain has been following "is one which, in the end, if pursued with patience and vigor, will save this old world from further terrible strife."

Big 3 Accused Of War Plots Against Reds

Moscow, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—Pravda and Izvestia said today the foreign ministers of the United States, Britain and France decided at their Paris meeting to turn West Germany into a base for attacking Russia.

The newspapers attributed to Representative William Robert Poage (D., Tex.) a suggestion that the United States recruit 25 divisions of German mercenaries to fight a war "which the American, British, French and Italian soldiers refuse."

This statement by Poage brought into the open what the three Western foreign ministers discussed secretly in Paris, Pravda said. The Communist organ warned that a war started by such means might bring woes to the American continent.

Izvestia listed Poage with Representative Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.), Senator John Foster Dulles (R., N. Y.), his brother Alan Dulles, Winston Churchill and Lord Templewood (formerly Sir Samuel Hoare) as "man-eating beasts."

Ill and Weary

Chinese Troops Flee To Hainan

(The following article was written for the Associated Press by James T. Pettus of Middleburg, Va., a former U. S. Air Force colonel who flew to Hongkong today from Hainan Island.)

By James T. Pettus

Hoihow, Hainan Island, China, Nov. 13 (AP).—This little-known island capital 15 miles south of the mainland has become the last refuge for many thousands of fleeing Nationalist soldiers.

Within the past six weeks more than 100,000 have arrived in this city of barely a quarter-million population.

They come across the narrow straits by ancient steamer, landing craft, junks and even sampans.

Ragged and weary, they wade ashore through the shallow surf, each carrying a bundle of the pitifully few things he could save during the retreat.

Most camp out on the sidewalks.

It has been raining for five days, and all are wet, dirty and discouraged. Many have lain ill on the sidewalks for days. Malaria is common and there is danger of typhus and cholera due to poor sanitary conditions.

Unpaid for months, soldiers try to sell their few belongings for food. There are nightly shootings in which numbers of persons have been killed.

Inland on Hainan, Red guerillac hold about one-third of the island. They are held in check by the regular Nationalist garrison of about 80,000 fairly well-equipped troops.

When the Reds strike, this garrison will find the large numbers of disorganized evacuated troops a liability rather than an asset.

Probe Jewel Robberies

London, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—Scotland Yard and the Surete Nationale teamed up today in an attempt to solve the Aga Khan jewel robbery and a string of similar holdups that have plagued the European playgrounds of the wealthy since the war.

Hong Kong, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—The Nationalist central news agency reported today that the provincial government had abandoned Kweiyang, capital of Kweichow Province, as Communist armies nearing that city drove a wedge between the remaining Nationalist armies.

Kweiyang lies 200 miles south of the refugee capital of Chungking, itself under threat by Communist armies approaching from north, east and south. One Communist column bypassed Kweiyang and drove north on Tsunyi, 130 miles below Chungking.

Dispatches from Chungking reported rumors that Kweiyang already had changed hands, but both Central and the Military News Agency said the situation was stabilized there with arrival of Gen. Ho Shiu-chow's army group from Yunnan.

The Communist radio tonight admitted the red armies were regrouping for a big winter offensive, designed to drive the last Nationalist troops off the mainland and to end the government's resistance.

British Brigade Set To Quit Greek Post

Salonika, Greece, Nov. 13 (AP).—British military sources disclosed today the entire Second Brigade, now stationed here, will be transferred to Cyprus, beginning before Christmas.

A war department spokesman in London said the transfer is one step leading toward withdrawal of all the British troops now in Greece.

Man Seized for Cruelty

Treviso, Italy, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—Police arrested Vito Brun, 30, today on charges he forced his 80-year-old father to live naked in a pig sty on his farm here.

Cold Storage Corneas Restore 3000 Eyes

Moscow, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—Russian eye surgeon V. P. Filatov reported today that he and his medical students had restored sight to 3000 persons by a method of transplanting corneas he developed 30 years ago.

Filatov, 75, said in a public lecture that his method, which involves placing corneas in cold storage before they are transplanted, was so simple when done with specially manufactured instruments that any ordinary oculist could perform the operation.

Perez Edict Hit by Court In Colombia

Bogota, Colombia, Nov. 13 (U.P.). A majority of the Supreme Court has denounced President Mariano Ospina Perez's interference with its procedure as unlawful and "unacceptable," it was announced today.

Chief Justice Pedro Castillo Pineda and eight other members of the 15-man court formally advised Ospina that his decree requiring that all of the court's rulings be approved by a three-quarters majority "overthrows national legal order."

The court portest was presented to the President yesterday, but none of Bogota's newspapers, censored under the terms of the four-day-old "state of siege," made any mention of it.

Ospina did not reply immediately.

Army-ruled Colombia was quiet today, so far as could be learned here. There were no disturbances in Bogota.

The state of siege was relaxed last night in Cartagena to permit Independence Day celebrations, including a contest to select Miss Colombia.

Schuman Rules Out France as U. S. Satellite

Metz, France, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman said today France owed a debt of gratitude to the United States for Marshall Plan aid but would not become an American satellite.

"If we refuse to set our watches by Moscow time so must we refuse to set them by American time," he said. "In certain cases, on the contrary, it is America which must set its watch by European time."

Earlier, at Montigny-les-Metz, Schuman asserted that Germany should have her present place in present-day Europe, but no more than her rightful place.

Five Italians Jailed In Destroyer Theft

Naples, Nov. 13 (AP).—For the theft of a destroyer, five men were sentenced yesterday to two years' imprisonment and a 15,000 lire fine ($25) each.

Using diving suits, the five had dismantled a destroyer sunk off the Harbor of Naples during the war. They sold the scrap to Neapolitan dealers.

Quirino Assured of Control of Philippine Congress

Manila, Philippine Islands, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—Elpidio Quirino's plurality in the Philippine presidential contest mounted gradually today and still incomplete returns showed that he will have firm control of both houses of congress when he begins a new four-year term December 30.

The country's political temper, which resulted in at least 40 deaths, began to cool off as official returns from last Tuesday's voting confirmed the Liberal Party landslide.

Quirino was expected to obtain a plurality of at least 400,000 votes. The latest official returns gave him 1,286,080. His closest opponent, Jose P. Laurel of the Nacioalistas, had 1,010,961, while Jose Avelino had 273,080.

There were still rumblings of election fraud charges and threats to block the congressional proclamation of the election results next month as prescribed by law.

Praise Paid YWCA for Curbing Reds on College Campuses

The importance of the Young Women's Christian Association as a bulwark against communism on college campuses was stressed yesterday at the Washington Cathedral.

At a vesper service opening a National YWCA Week of Fellowship and Prayer, Dr. John Sutherland Bonnell, pastor of Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York, declared that "on college campuses all over this Nation, Communist cells are established and representatives of these are working untiringly to seduce the sudents of this land from their allegiance to American and Christian ideals."

Christianity Stressed

"Only one world," he said, "possesses a goal and creed that cannot only meet but can master the claims of communism, and that is the Church of Jesus Christ."

The Communists, he said, do not tell students how slave labor camps can pave the way for enlightened and just and free society, or how a political creed that scraps all moral and ethical standards is going to work out a basis of brotherhood.

"It is high time," he warned, "that people become aware of this idealistic element in communism, the major element embodied in propaganda to young people."

Pointing out that Christianity is the only creed which can meet the Communists' appeal to the masses, Dr. Bonnell declared that "in the Gospel of the Kingdom of God there is a surely founded hope of world-wide internationalism for all humanity."

Feeds on Human Wrongs

It must never be forgotten that "communism grows and flourishes and feeds on every form of human wrong, and prospers most in those countries where these wrongs exist," the clergyman said, declaring that "we must take the Gospel of Christ seriously."

"We must manifest something of the evangelical zeal and passion of the Communists as we seek to bring others under the sway of Christ. We must drain the social swamps in Christian countries if we are to be ready to meet the challenge of the day in which we live," Dr. Bonnell declared.

At the service, a contribution of $145,945.37 for the world work of the Y was presented. It was given by YWCAs in the 48 States and three territories of the United States.

Behind the Curtain

Censors Clear Only What Aids State

Tenth in a Series

By Joseph Newman

Paris, Nov. 13 (NYHT).—The Moscow correspondent writes a story, delivers it to the censorship office in the Central Telegraph Building on Gorky st. and then waits. Sometimes he waits forever, because his story is never cleared.

If it follows the party line and contributes to the interest of the state, as the censor understands it, the story clears quickly without a hitch. If it does not, passages are deleted or the entire story suppressed.

Hardly a day goes by without deletions or total suppression of a story filed by Moscow correspondents. With few exceptions the censor's decision is final.

Stassen Sees Stalin

In one of his characteristic statements Premier Josef V. Stalin told Harold Stassen during their talk in the Kremlin on April 9, 1947, that censorship was necessary as protection against false reports. Judging by the daily heavy censorship of stories filed in Moscow, one might get the impression that a good deal of what the correspondents are writing is false. That may be the case, but at least 90 percent of the stories coming from Moscow are from Soviet newspapers, magazines or books.

Even at that, many things appear in Soviet publications which the censor will not clear for transmission abroad.

On June 16, 1948, I filed the complete text of a statement which appeared in "Izvestia," the second most important newspaper of the country. It was killed outright.

The statement dealt with the collective farm situation in the Kostroma region, northeast of Moscow. It included the following sentence: "By January, 1948, or almost one year after the plenary session of the Central Committee of the Communist Party called for an improvement in the cattle situation on collective farms, over 400 collective farms in the Kostroma region had livestock farms with but five cows."

Censor Ever Present

Official statements, made at public sessions of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR, the highest elective body of the country, likewise are not immune from censorship.

Correspondents and members of the diplomatic corps are invited to the Kremlin every year to watch this performance, which usually consists of prolongued applause for Comrade Stalin, budget and other legislative proposals by his ministers and immediate, unanimous approval by the deputies.

At the last session, held in March, an appeal was made by Deputy Kuprianov of the Karelo-Finnish Republic. He reported that the republic was suffering from a severe labor shortage; that it has but two thirds of the territory's prewar population because persons "evacuated" during the war have not returned from the east (a hint that they might be in Siberian forced labor camps). He appealed for their return.

He disclosed that the republic's building industry was imperiled by the lack of bricks. Unless this situation is remedied, he warned, "all construction in the republic will have to be stopped because there will be no bricks."

This example of slander and false reporting was suppressed.

On Handling Stalin

All reports about Stalin and his entourage are treated by the censor with the utmost care and probably apprehension. Following the funeral service for Andrei Zhdanov in Red Square, I reported the fact that Stalin and the surviving members of the Politburo passed through the gate into the Kremlin grounds "and disappeared from public sight."

The last phrase was deleted. Though Stalin is seldom seen by the public, the censor could not permit transmission of any impression that he is ever out of public sight.

On June 16, 1948, I wrote a report about a decision by the Supreme Court of the USSR which invalidated the will of Mrs. T. A. Kichatova on the ground that private property cannot be bequeathed to a church because the latter does not qualify as a "social organization."

The report was suppressed, adding Supreme Court rulings to the list of official material subject to censorship.

Nervous About Humor

The censor is extremely nervous about humor, even Soviet humor which sometimes appears in the Soviet press.

Prices of goods in Moscow stores, after highly publicized price reductions, are almost always suppressed. Thus when price cuts were announced last March, correspondents could report that a man's woolen suit had been reduced by 12 percent. They couldn't say it had been reduced from the previously fixed price of 1400 rubles or that it could now be brought for the equivalent of $154 at the favored diplomatic rate of eight rubles to the dollar (or $246 at the official rate).

From time to time the censor deletes one word to distort the meaning of a report completely. I once wrote, on the occasion of a May Day holiday, that "some people in Moscow seemed better off" than the year before. The censor deleted the word "some" so that all people in Moscow would seem better off.

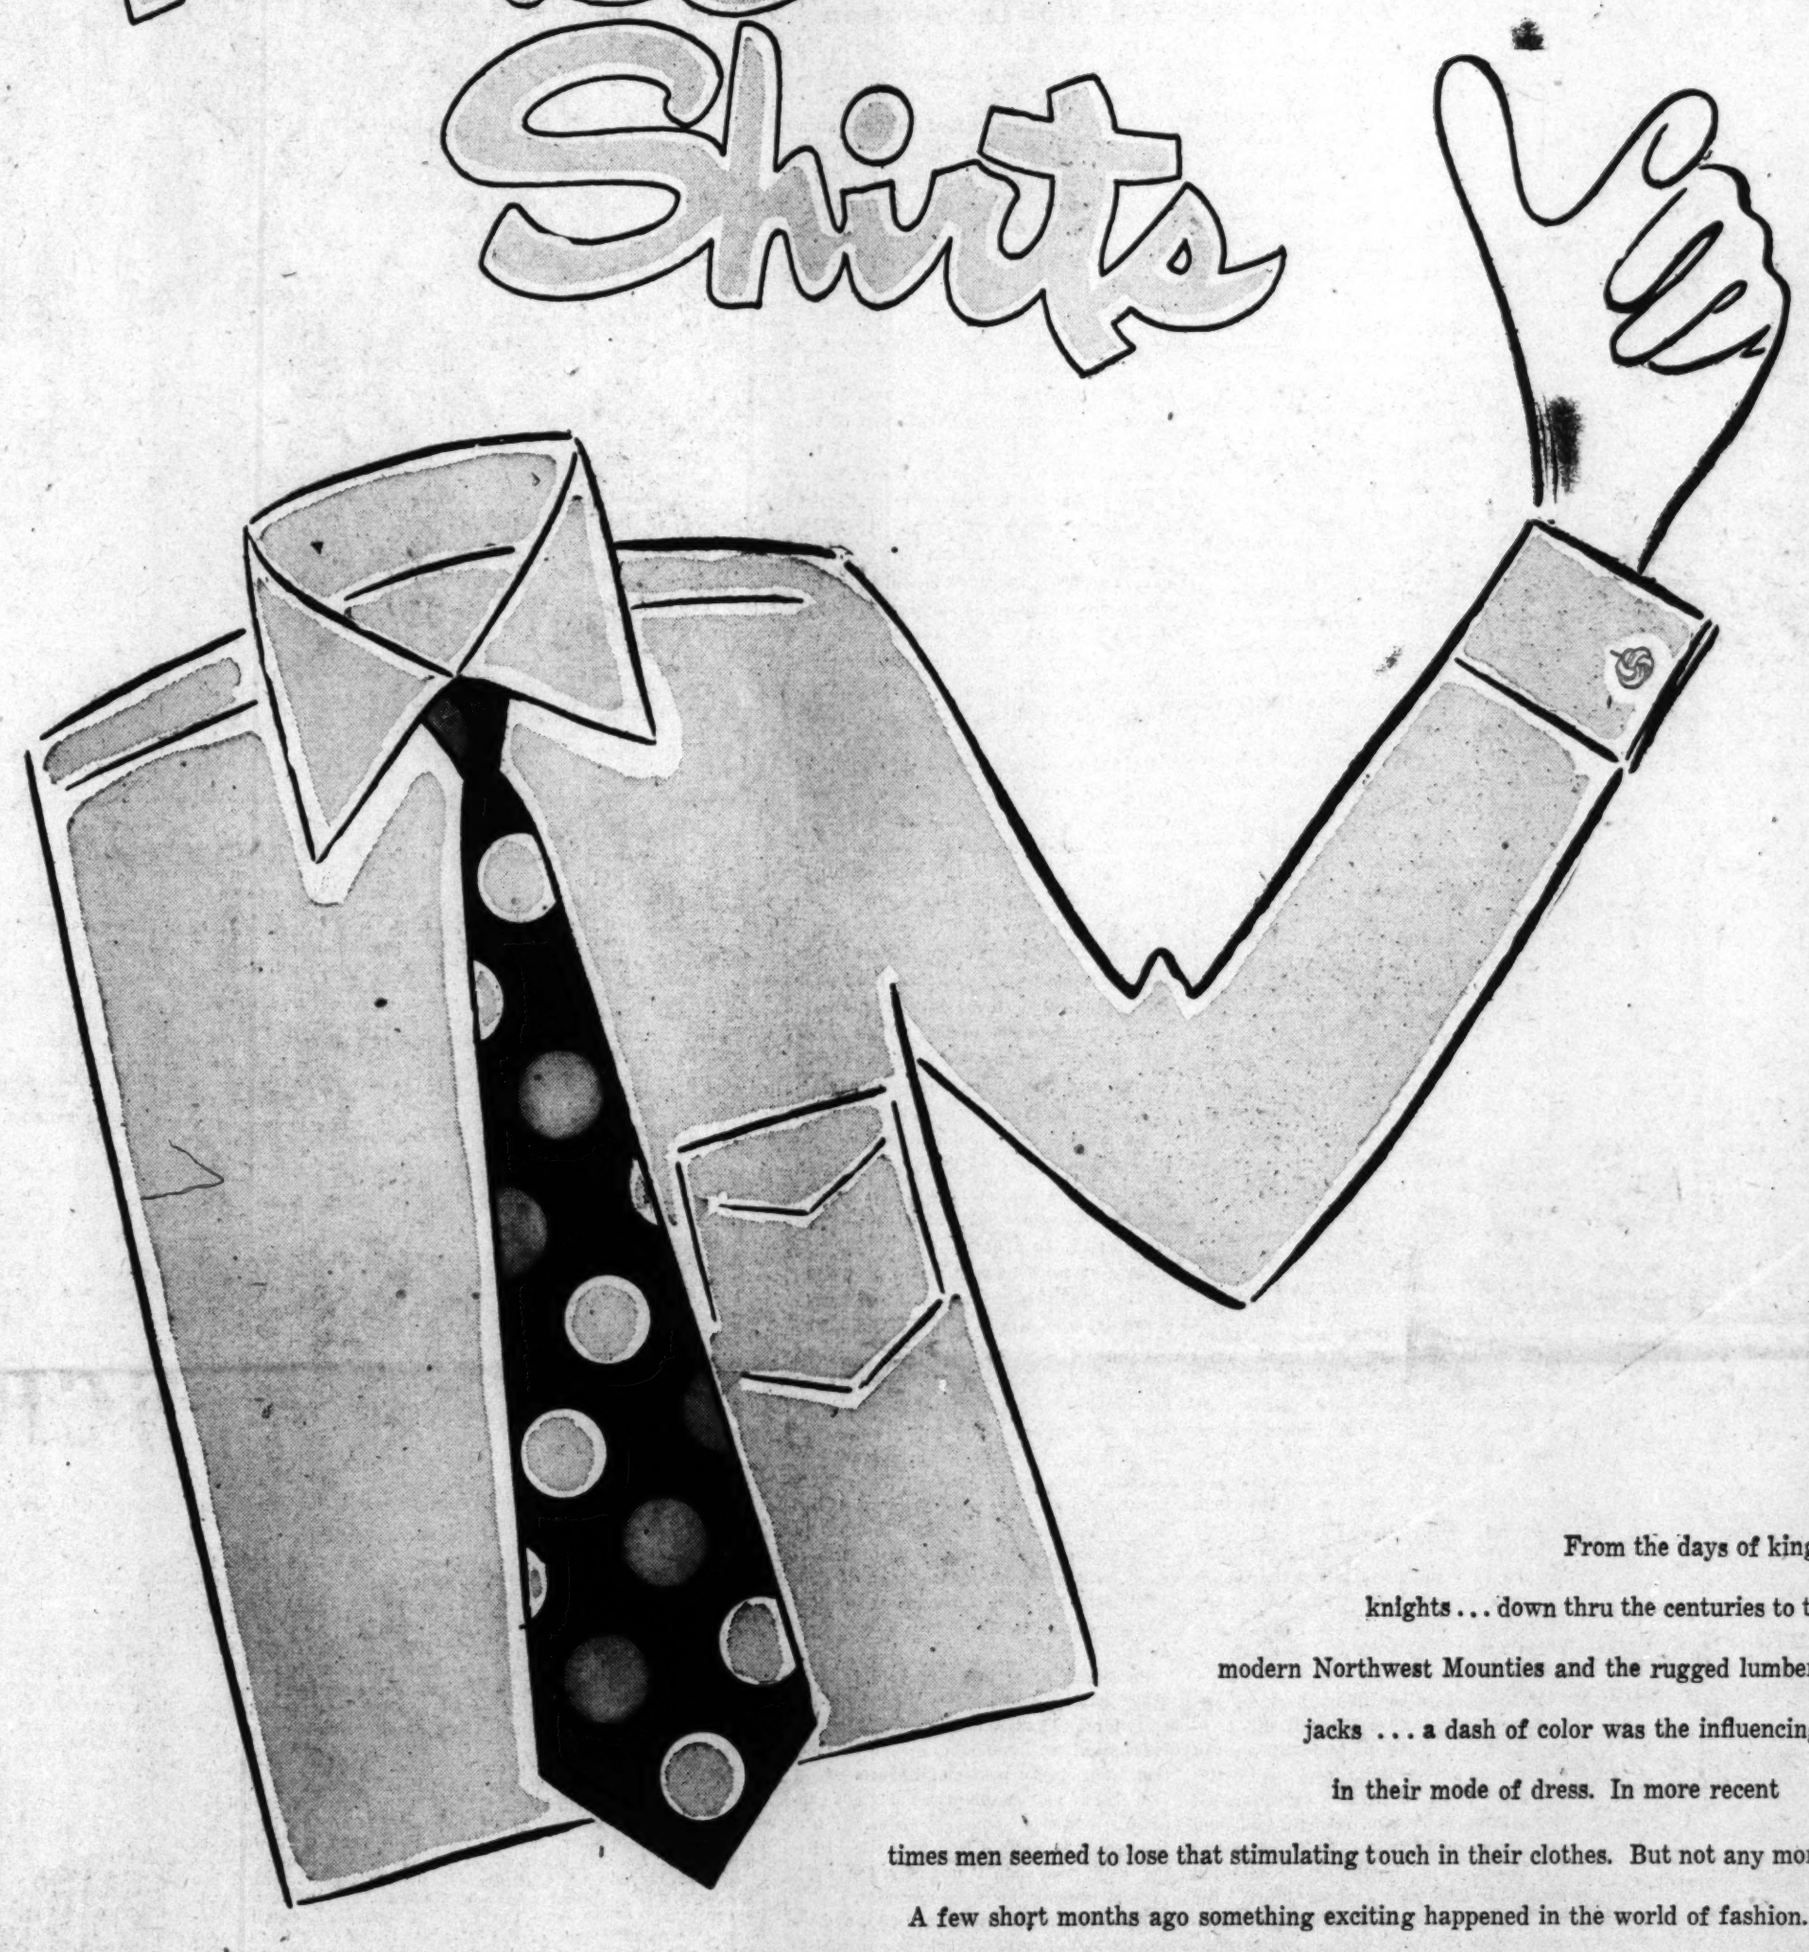
Pastel Shirts

FOR THAT ADDED TOUCH OF INVIGORATING COLOR



From the days of kings and knights . . . down thru the centuries to the more modern Northwest Mounties and the rugged lumberjacks . . . a dash of color was the influencing factor in their mode of dress. In more recent times men seemed to lose that stimulating touch in their clothes. But not any more! A few short months ago something exciting happened in the world of fashion. Pastel Colors were produced in men's shirts. Yes, in soft-toned pink and blue . . . in canary and helio. And then the enthusiastic color-traits of our forefathers emerged in the modern male. Pastel shirts were acclaimed throughout the nation. For pastels filled a need . . . a very definite need for an occasional change from white and patterned shirts . . . a need to brighten wardrobes with a spot of invigorating color. Smartly clad men nowadays are choosing pastel shirts . . . choosing them in pink, canary, helio, eggshell, bamboo, blue, grey and green. You, too, will enjoy the stimulating, virile colors of handsome pastel shirts—at your favorite Men's Wear Specialty Store.

Duty Of A Judge

The Very Rev. Francis J. Connell of Catholic University has rendered a public service by his interpretation of what Pope Pius XII had to say the other day about the duty of Catholic judges. Dr. Connell says that the Pope's advice given to Catholic judges will not prevent them from giving "the full measure of service and loyalty to the laws of our country." While he says that the American judge of Catholic faith "should avoid taking divorce cases" if he can, he also interprets the Pope's pronouncement to mean that it is "not intrinsically wrong" for a Catholic judge to decree a marriage dissolved, so far as the civil law is concerned. In other words, the judge is free to hand down a sentence or enter a decree of which he does not approve because it is necessary under the law.

We hope that this interpretation of the Pope's advice proves to be generally acceptable; for it would be a great misfortune to have any of our judges feel that they are under obligation to adhere to ecclesiastical law in preference to the law of the land when there happens to be conflict between the two. In writing about the Pope's remarks last week this newspaper carefully refrained from interpreting them as laying any obligation upon American judges that would be incompatible with their duty to adhere to the law of the land. The point we made is that a judge must necessarily uphold the law of the land because he is a civil and not an ecclesiastical official. It is gratifying that Dr. Connell also recognizes this basic principle.

One of the most important facts about our judicial system is that our judges apply and uphold many laws of which they do not personally approve. The judge is not a potentate dispensing justice according to his own notion or his own moral code. He is an agent of the Nation (or the State) sworn to uphold its laws. In his function as a judge he owes no obligation to any church or any religious doctrine. Of course, the law of the land which he applies includes many moral concepts that have been borrowed from religion. A judge's view as to his moral duty is also likely to be influenced by his religious background. But we think it is important to remember that his duty as a judge is to apply the law of the land as it has been constitutionally enacted. Any other course would bring hopeless confusion between civil and ecclesiastical authority.

Costly Strike

The agreement concluded between United States Steel and the Steelworkers' Union signalizes the virtual end of a strike that has tied up the industry for almost a month and a half. It has been an exceedingly costly strike, the effects of which will be felt for months to come. The steelworkers have been without wages since the first of October, and layoffs of other workers caused by the strike have cost many millions of dollars in wages. The steel companies have also paid heavily through loss of profits, while steel-consuming industries will be handicapped for some time by steel shortages. Workers will have to pay off debts incurred while they were idle, and that will have a continuing adverse effect on local retail business, already hard hit by the strike. It is also highly probable that the cost of the pension plan which the companies have accepted under duress will be shifted in part, at least, to the public in the form of higher steel prices.

The strike has resulted, moreover, in an unfortunate type of settlement. The details of any pension plan should be based on careful preliminary studies and adapted to the varying capacity of individual companies to pay. The present agreements have followed the general pattern of that concluded with Bethlehem, in disregard of the fact that Bethlehem is in a better position to finance the pattern pension plan than its competitors.

Although the union has won a victory in its fight for the principle of noncontribution, so far as old-age pensions are concerned, we do not think the issue has been settled. For under the agreement with Big Steel, the foremost contender for contributory pensions, the present plan may be terminated at the end of two years. That appears to be one of the best features of a pension program imposing heavy financial liabilities on the industry and offering inadequate protection to employes of weaker companies. No doubt experience will prove the need for revision of the plan, and when the time comes to consider changes, it is to be hoped that both the companies and unions will be willing to sit down together to negotiate a settlement of their differences by peaceful means.

European Outlook

Federate or perish! The admonition came four years ago from Premier Attlee. At that time the visitor to Britain was besieged by inquiries over the American attitude toward a community of Western nations. The usual answer was that the British should go ahead and organize Europe and then ask for American support for such an organization. What has happened in the intervening years? The United States, sensing that the division of power between America and Russia is provocative of war, has demonstrated its support of a Third Force in Europe. Indeed, Messrs. Acheson, Hoffman and McCloy are zealously pushing it. In continental Europe a quickened public consciousness of the need has burgeoned into a crusade which, having found a name and a habitation in the Council of Europe, is making federation the stuff of public debate. But the statesmen in Britain and elsewhere have hitherto been dragging their feet.

Some of them are taking refuge behind the obstacles posed by American policy. What are these alleged obstacles? Tariff and customs policies are often mentioned as primary deterrents. The fact is that in the intervening years there have been two substantial cuts in the American tariff, together with evidence of a determination to clear out the jungle of procedures hampering the import of foreign goods. The American market still looks formidable to the British manufacturer, but, as anybody who has tried to buy British goods will bear witness, Mr. Hoffman is assuredly right in maintaining that the dollars are here to be earned, and can be earned with something approaching enterprise in merchandising. Then there is the difficulty of finance. Yet the Marshall Plan is in operation by way not only of financing recovery of production but also of helping the British repay war debts to such eastern countries as India. Private investment, to be sure, has been meager, but the reason cannot be put on America's doorstep, but is due to the lack of currency stabilization in Europe. There is more than a hint, finally, that there will be no insistence on a scrupulous nondiscrimination toward non-Europeans in case tariff and currency integration is worked out.

Another group of European nationalists fall back on the absence of security as the excuse for nonaction on European integration. Till Europe feels secure against attack, they say, they cannot be expected to take a chance and create a community with their neighbors. Yet this argument was removed by the signature of the Atlantic Pact and the launching of the arms program. These actions on the part of America constitute a revolution. The United States is committed to the defense, not the liberation, of Europe. The assurance has been given many times; it is explicit and implicit in the Atlantic Pact and its arms corollary. Yet the assurance has to be repeated for the doubting Thomases who are pinning nonaction about integration on American uncertainties.

America is now beginning to ask for performance from Europe. At least, this country would like to see the same actionism in evidence in Europe which the United States has shown. Here there has been progress; up till now in Europe, retrogression; and retrogression of an order which compelled Mr. Hoffman, in defense of the Marshall Plan, to counter with a remonstrance. The mere fact that American officialdom entertains a fear that overtures in favor of Europeanization may be regarded as interference is indicative of the gap in attitudes. Four years ago the attitudes were reversed. In the first flush of peace the American visitors found modern Metternichs looking to the building up of the European community. They acted and felt, in other words, like "natives of Europe." American policy now is at one with the European dream, yet the dream has become overlaid with a reaction to economic nationalism, financed in part by Marshall funds, which has piled new difficulties on old.

The difficulty, insofar as British policy is concerned, is traditional. This is still based on keeping relations with the Commonwealth, with Europe, and with the United States in balance. Sterling area has been added to the pillars on which British policy rests. Even in the days of England's power, this job of keeping a nice balance was always an acrobatic feat and drew on Britain the charge of being perfidious. In these harder days for Britain the feat seems almost impossible, and the wonder of the onlooker is how long she can keep it up, and what she will do if the leadership in a European grouping is established by a Franco-German understanding—the logical start in acting upon the Attlee admonition.

Trial For Thomas

Judge Holtzoff probably had no choice but to postpone again the trial of Representative J. Parnell Thomas. It is a common enough thing for attorneys to become involved in several cases concurrently, and courtesy requires that the trial be put off until Mr. Thomas' counsel can appear with him in court. As for Mr. Thomas himself, he already has enjoyed considerable leniency from the court because of his health, for the indictment against him for alleged payroll padding and conspiring to defraud the Government has stood for nearly a year. It would, of course, be unfair to try him when his life might be endangered—although Mr. Thomas himself did not always observe such standards in his conduct of the Un-American Activities Committee. But now two physicians who have examined him are agreed that he is physically fit for trial, and Judge Holtzoff has acted properly in denying further delay. The implication that a member of the House has engaged in such nefarious practices as those charged is an ugly one which involves the morality of Congress quite as much as Mr. Thomas' own reputation. It is in the public interest that there be no further delay in hearing the facts.

No Dollar Devaluation

The arguments against an increase in the dollar price of gold are so conclusive that it is hard to understand how rumors that the United States intended to take such action gained currency. However, the rumors have been so persistent that President Truman has taken cognizance of them by stating emphatically that so long as he is in office the price of gold will not be changed.

This announcement is most welcome in view of the demoralizing uncertainty created by irresponsible predictions of early dollar devaluation. For an increase in the price of gold, entailing devaluation of the dollar in terms of gold, would offset the expected beneficial effects of recent devaluations of the pound and other currencies by making it more difficult for foreigners to sell their goods to us and by stimulating our own export trade. It would be an incredibly stupid move on our part as well as an act of bad faith thus to nullify the efforts of other countries to put their overvalued currencies on a more realistic exchange basis in terms of a supposedly stable dollar.

This hare-brained proposal would, of course, increase the dollar value of the gold reserves of foreign countries and temporarily relieve the pressure of dollar shortages. But in the long run these countries would pay dearly for such a windfall. The chief beneficiaries would be the gold mining interests that have been plagued by rising production costs in face of a fixed price for their product. If the price of gold were to be raised in answer to their prayers, more gold would be mined and shipped to the United States and each ounce would provide more dollars for the exporters to spend.

But what would happen to this country if gold shipments were stimulated by such means? The United States is already flooded with gold. But for our willingness to accept it at a fixed price of $35 per ounce, the price of gold would, no doubt, be far below present levels. In short, gold producers are already being subsidized at our expense, since we take their overvalued metal and store it in vaults, in exchange for our own useful goods and services. To be sure, devaluation of the dollar would put the Treasury in funds. For the resultant increase in the dollar value of the Government's gold holdings would yield a so-called devaluation profit that could be used to cover budget deficits or spent for other purposes. However, this kind of trick Government financing would have the same inflationary effect as the issuance of paper money.

Furthermore, an influx of gold brought about by dollar devaluation would afford a basis for a potential multiple expansion of credit; and this would be a spur to inflation. The dollar prices of imports would also rise as well as the prices of goods consisting partly of imported materials, and these increases would lead to a rise in living costs that might intensify the ever-present pressure for wage increases.

Inflation has not yet been licked, and we should be asking for trouble to add fuel to a smoldering fire that is already being fanned by deficit financing and strike-backed demands for wage concessions. We conclude, therefore, that maintenance of the dollar at its present gold value is an indispensable aid to recovery of world trade and a necessary defense against inflation at home and abroad.

Five-Cent Coffee

Another venerable standby of American life, the 5-cent cup of coffee, is reported on the way out. Rising prices of coffee, owing to the devastation of crops in South America, have caused some restaurant men to predict the imminent arrival of 10-cent coffee. The president of the Chicago Restaurant Association fatalistically says "the 5-cent cup of coffee has long been dying and is now definitely dead." If this be true, those Americans who have more nickels than dimes in their pockets will soon appreciate the plight of the British in the curtailment of their tea. For coffee is the great American drink. It is estimated that about 85 percent of adults drink it as against 59 percent who drink tea. What is more, coffee outranks tea socially—at least in Washington. Legend has it that a State Department chief of protocol made that ruling when beset by harried hostesses who had trouble assigning tea pouring and coffee pouring positions to wives of officials.

Coffee's social rank may further increase if its price is doubled. But what about its standing at lunch counter, snack bar, drug store where its consumption has been steadily rising, especially in the last decade? In fact, what about the nickel itself? It no longer buys a cigar, a streetcar ride, a sack of peanuts, a seat at the movies, or, as in the days of its glory, an ice cream soda. It too seems to be on the way out. Perhaps we might as well face the fact that we are in a 10-cent and up—mostly up—world.

Letters To The Editor

Communications must be addressed to the editor and must carry the complete name and street address of the writer, though pen names will be permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters of less than 200 words will be given preference, and all letters are subject to condensation. No communication can be returned.

Central High School

The letter signed "Interested" in your November 7 issue indicates that its writer had not yet read Superintendent Corning's report of November 2 or else refused to be influenced by the numerous facts presented there. If alumni sentiment plays a part in the final decision to preserve Central High School's existence as Washington's most historic public educational unit, it is no more than would be justified by the practical values of such sentiment in operating a school—values ranging from morale-building influence on the student body to alumni help in obtaining tangible benefits for the school (notably the very building now under discussion).

Some partisans of the colored high schools are demanding two incompatible things. They insist upon immediate relief for an overcrowded school by disrupting another large high school organization permanently. At the same time they want to keep the "old cast-off" Central building only temporarily, and to have their full program of new buildings go forward as planned.

The Park View School should provide as workable an annex for Cardozo now as it did a few years ago for the overflow of the white Veterans High School. It is regrettable that, amid all the emphasis last spring on taking a building away from some white high school, the simpler Park View possibility was not brought to light.

As for Central, the visitor will find it reasonably well occupied by the seventh or eighth largest enrollment among Washington's three dozen secondary school units. So far from its being already surrounded by colored population, a large proportion of its enrollment comes from the immediate neighborhood of the school, although it also serves as the most convenient white high school for an area stretching all the way down to the Potomac. With the added prospect of gradually developing city-wide work on the junior college level, the Central building would be rendering valuable service for many years to come in the hands of those who are "sentimentally" attached to it, instead of being prematurely reduced to an unloved makeshift role for temporary purposes.

Indonesian Chaos

It is clear that the Round Table Conference denies in the most dictatorial way the wishes of millions of Indonesian minorities. Hundreds of thousands of Indonesians are not in a position to make their wishes known. This is against all the solemn declarations the Western world has made since beating the Hitler regime.

At the moment complete chaos is reigning on the island of Java. Dutchmen can stay there only with danger to their lives. No serious man can deny that the authorities in Djokja are Communists. They only wait for the return of Mr. Hatta and on the conveyance of soveignty to make the "People's Republic." According to reports of Dutch experts, Java is going to be Communist.

In the Round Table Conference it appears that the Republican delegation has not sufficient delegates nor experts to make decisions about difficult problems. To govern a country at present, there must be a great corps of officials that are fully posted about everything and that can settle rather difficult things in a decent way. It has become clear that neither Mr. Hatta, nor what he calls his government in Djokja, has such an apparatus.

Therefore the lives of millions, great territories of raw materials and international possessions are left to a group that is hardly suitable for governing an isle as big as Texel in the Zuiderzee. And we may not do what every man with just a little common sense would do—make there an ordinary state in a reasonable and sensible way over a 10-year period, following the example of the Philippines.

Minorities are terrorized. Djokja is Communist. Big, rich Indonesia has no single, capable, decently equipped government. And under these circumstances it is proposed that under international compulsion, Queen Juliana will give sovereignty to others. To whom? To chaos!

Venezuelan Floods

I am in receipt of official information from Venezuela to the effect that published press reports of high loss of life in the recent floods of the Guaire River were in error. It is a relief to report that only three lives were lost, and a small number of persons were injured slightly. One thousand persons were made homeless. Property damage is not yet determined.

All of the injured have been taken care of and displaced persons have been given lodging, food and clothing. Governmental and private relief agencies are functioning. My government is making immediate plans for permanent housing for our citizens who lost their homes in the flood areas.

Ambassador of Venezuela.

'Guests From Abroad'

Your November 6 editorial, "Guests from Abroad," is just the tonic the "reinvigorated United Nations Club" needs. Its new board and committees seek, first, to reappraise its objectives, enlarge its membership, expand its functions, and, second, to determine coincidentally what went wrong and to satisfy its creditors.

We think great progress has been made in the last three weeks toward the solution of our problems and the revitalizing of our program. We thank you for your voluntary and generous encouragement and recognition of the place the club can and will fill in this community.

FRANKLIN C. SALISBURY,
Secretary for the Board of Governors, United Nations Club.

Soviet Anti-Semitism

In the interest of justice, I must object strongly to the deliberately provocative statements being made in your current series on the Soviet Union by Joseph Newman.

Considering the urgent need at the present time for improving the quality of American public opinion toward USSR and vice versa, the very act of publishing such a document is in itself a disservice to the cause of world peace.

There is no question that certain evils and abuses exist in the USSR as every other country, but the attempt of Newman to characterize the USSR as anti-Semitic is preposterous. In regard to his statements about this alleged anti-Semitism, I can only say that I personally served with the Air Force during a large part of 1944 in the Ukraine immediately after the Nazi evacuation of that area. During this period I witnessed no act or statement of any kind which was anti-Semitic or offensive to any national group.

"More Airports"

You are to be congratulated on what seems almost like an intellectual sunrise that inspired your editorial of November 9, "More Airports," particularly in the statement "Let everyone admit it: the location of the National Airport on its present site was a costly mistake which violated every canon of traffic pattern safety." This is what the Airline Pilots Association tried to tell everyone when the Camp Springs airport bill was under consideration in the Congress. A few of the rest of us fought with the airline pilots for such an airport. We were opposed by every civic organization in Washington, every newspaper, and, ironically enough, by the president of Eastern Airlines with the greatest vigor, and by the CAA.

To correct this costly mistake, the bold action that you suggest is still not bold enough to amount to more than a stopgap. If the present airport is badly sited, it would still be so if all military activity were moved from Bolling Field and Naval Air Station to Andrews Field; for it is now admitted by the CAA boys (was admitted before the tragic collision of November 1) that National Airport is too small for air transport (commercial) operation, and it cannot be expanded. It is still down in a hollow in the shadow of the Washington Monument, and I have known it to be buried in fog when places like Andrews Field had unlimited ceiling and visibility.

Bold, effective action would be to make a clean sweep of the whole messy business by moving the commercial airline terminal out to Andrews Field. With the new South Capitol st. bridge nearing completion, Andrews Field will be but 10 or 15 minutes farther out from Washington than the present National Airport (and bear in mind that Andrews Field is not as far out as its present USAF entrance on Marlboro pike). With our fast airliners crossing the continent in nine hours at this time, it is senseless to argue that a 20- or 25-minute ride out to an airport over a beautiful highway (the Suitland Parkway) is a hardship in surface transportation.

So far as National Airport is concerned, it could still be useful, either by letting the USAF generals have it or by operating it as a base for private-itinerant and "miscellaneous flights" (in the technical sense). That is what it is good for, but it never has been the spot for airline operation.

While we are on the subject, let's stop this nonsense about ruling flying off the airways, or off all airports on which an insignificant few airliners operate. The only danger of collision between an airliner and a private light plane in cruising flight is one that the airline pilots themselves admit to be under their own control; they need only to scan the sky ahead to avoid running into us, but to do so interrupts or interferes with their complete relaxation in flight.

So far as ground traffic is concerned, there is no danger involved; but the airline boys simply cannot bear to have a control-tower operator give a private airplane any rights whatsoever, and some tower operators do have the nerve to give us a few rights—not many. Let us hope that some good results from your editorial pressure.

BENJAMIN KING,
Private Pilot-Owner.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

No More Titos

A THOROUGHLY disturbing conclusion was reached at the recent Paris meeting of American diplomats from eastern Europe. The chief purpose of the meeting was to canvass the possibility of the emergence of independent, Tito-like regimes in this area. And those present at the meeting agreed, without dissent, that for the foreseeable future, there will be, and can be, no more Titos in eastern Europe.

This conclusion is disturbing for an obvious reason. It has been a basic assumption of American foreign policy that the Kremlin's grip on its European empire could ultimately be loosened. And in fact, the Kremlin's grip is tighter than ever before.

The Kremlin's reaction to the challenge of Titoism was given by Moscow's Pravda, when it ordered "merciless liquidation," and warned the satellite countries against "magnanimity." Bulgaria provides probably the most striking example of the ruthelessness—and effectiveness—of this policy.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED in Bulgaria is no simple purge of a leader or two the better to encourage the others. Instead, there has been a total making over of the entire structure of the state and the Communist Party. The aging, brilliant George Dimitrov, the man who defied Goering, died first in Moscow; no one, of course, knows whether his death was natural. The second to go has been Traicho Kostov, acting Premier and Secretary General of the Bulgarian Communist Party, universally recognized until his arrest last August as second only to Dimitrov.

Kostov must be extraordinarily tough. His "immediate trial" has been repeatedly announced, only to be postponed. Apparently it is requiring an unusual amount of time to prepare him, by the usual delicate methods, for the abject confession of guilt which is expected of him. But the purge does not end with Kostov.

The fact is that the whole state and Communist apparatus in Bulgaria was heavily weighted with Kostov men. These have had to be uprooted en masse by the only man in Bulgaria the Kremlin trusts, Valko Chervenkov. Among hundreds of others, the Ministers of Finance, Industry, Public Works and Transport, the Deputy Foreign Minister and the Chief of the General Staff have recently been arrested and are awaiting trial. A roughly parallel situation would exist here if, say, President Truman had died mysteriously abroad, and half the Cabinet and the Pentagon chiefs had been jailed, together with a host of lesser functionaries, and were awaiting almost certain death.

Even this, of course, does not suggest the full extent of the terror. The most extreme measures must be used on the peasants to collect food (this has been particularly difficult, significantly, in the areas near the Yugoslav border) and on the workers to prevent "wrecking" in factories and on the railroads.

This "merciless liquidation" has led to something like a general paralysis in Bulgaria. But the point is that the terror is achieving its object. For the foreseeable future, Bulgarian Titoism is unthinkable.

MOREOVER, the same thing is true everywhere else in the Soviet Union's eastern European empire, although there are wide variations in the superficial pattern of control. In Poland, a particularly significant variation has ocurred, with the appointment of Soviet Marshal Konstantin Rokossovsky as Polish Defense Minister and army commander.

That the Kremlin has been able to impose Rokossovsky on Poland is a sign of strength rather than weakness. If the Soviets decide to withdraw the Red Army from eastern Germany, Soviet power will thus be firmly maintained on the German border. Moreover, if in their drive to capture Germany through the medium of German nationalism the Soviets decide to offer the territories awarded to Poland, actual power exercised directly on the spot will be required to keep the Poles in line. But again the point is that the Soviets have this power, and mean to exercise it.

This does not mean that Titoism has not imposed a strain on the Soviet power structure. Both within the eastern European empire and outside it (the effect of Titoism on the world Communist apparatus will be examined in a forthcoming report in this space) the strain exists, and it is great. But the American experts who met in Paris agreed that the Soviet structure of power is fully capable of absorbing this strain indefinitely. The net effect of Titoism in eastern Europe has been actually to strengthen the Kremlin's hold.

This suggests that an underlying premise of American policy—that a continued policy of containment would progressively weaken the power of the Kremlin—may be an illusion. And this in turn suggests that some very hard thinking on the whole direction of American policy is in order.

Moscow's Squeeze

By Marquis Childs

Satellites In A War Economy

FRANKFURT, Germany.—The evidence grows that in every way, both big and little, the countries in the Russian orbit are carrying out the mandate of Moscow and squeezing out all elements that might offer even the most remote potential resistance. The conspicuous example, partly because American correspondents still in Prague report at least some of the news, is Czechoslovakia.

Childs

But in varying degrees the some thing is happening in Poland, Romania, Hungary and Bulgaria. All contacts with the West are being closed off in more accelerated and ruthless fashion.

American newspapermen are being excluded. My wife and I have been denied visas for Poland and Czechoslovakia, although two years ago I was permitted to visit Warsaw and wrote from there about the way in which that most-destroyed of all cities was being rebuilt.

Western diplomats are more and more sequestered. In Warsaw, diplomats representing Western nations have been forbidden to drive any distance east of the capital. The suspicion exists that this is because of Russian troop movements westward from the Russian-Polish frontier. However, it may be merely part of the war of nerves.

The greatest stress is put by Moscow on Czechoslovakia. One of the Cominform's most effective agents expressed it in a talk with me something like this:

"The example of Czechoslovakia will be most important. It will be a demonstration to the world that a highly organized industrial state also can become a Communist state. This will mean much more than the transformation of a primarily agricultural state such as Romania or Hungary.

"You in America are making a great error in your interpretation of events in Czechoslovakia. You listen to the protests of those who have suffered from the adjustment and you interpret that to mean that Czechoslovakia's economy has been damaged, whereas actually the opposite is true. The economy of Czechoslovakia has been strengthened."

ACCORDING to reports trickling out of Czechoslovakia, this is largely propaganda. For the time being at least, production has been impaired and the country is poorer because of the drive to squeeze out the middle class and eliminate the small factory and the small-shop owner.

The small producer always has been an important part of the Czech economy. Figures for May of this year showed that 240,737 small firms had 753,601 employes. This included not alone retail distributors but 27,207 firms fabricating iron and steel with an average of less than four employes each. When the Sudeten Germans were driven out, many of the most able craftsmen in the production of glass and novelties, important in Czechoslovakia's prewar export trade, also were driven out.

Whether even in the long run new collectivized units will be more efficient is certainly doubtful. The trend in the United States is away from centralization and toward decentralization, experience having shown that the giant plant was often less efficient than the small plant.

CZECH propaganda makes much of the fact that certain essentials have been taken off the ration. But the fact is that the moment they go off, the price goes sky high and the commodities are difficult or impossible to obtain.

There is one outstanding reality about the Czech economy today which should cause policymakers in Washington to give serious thought to a new approach to at least this one satellite. Without essential supplies from the West—rubber, cotton and so on—Czech industry could not continue to produce at even the present levels.

The time has come, in my opinion, to review the trade balance with Czechoslovakia. If the Czech exports sent out to western Europe are not essential, and there is good reason to believe they are not, then it may be merely self-interest and ordinary common sense to stop the flow of essential commodities.

For the belief is growing among experienced observers that the real objective of Moscow in each of the satellite states is to build toward a central war economy. There is every reason why America should refuse to contribute to that process.

The immediate enemy against which all this effort, the purges and the ruthless collectivization, is directed may be Yugoslavia. It may be defensive rather than offensive. But if the satellites can be reduced to complete subjection, and the indications are that the resistance in Czechoslovakia to the current tyranny is more and more feeble and passive, then Moscow will have achieved a larger goal and the fate of Yugoslavia will in a sense be irrelevant.

Luxury Cruise Ship Beached

STRIKES ROCKS—The luxury cruise ship Corsair is shown beached after she struck a rock and gashed a hole near the bow in the harbor at Acapulco, Mexico. Capt. H. Nedden of Vancouver, skipper of the former J. Pierpont Morgan yacht, promptly beached the craft, keeping it from sinking. Photo was taken from the cliff above the harbor. gree turn to the left and then come in, they said, but did not acknowledge the message.

Bridoux testified he never heard of the DC-4, never saw it until his engine sliced it in two, and never was told to make a 360-degree turn. Instead, he saw what appeared to be a "C-45 Beechcraft or a Lockheed C-60," which he thought was the "No. 1" plane.

Seconds before the planes rammed together and plummeted into the Potomac, killing 55 persons, there was a frantic order from the tower.

Controller Glenn Tigner said it was a "turn left," repeated twice to Bridoux. Bridoux said he heard a call to "clear to the left," repeated twice, but directed to no one in particular. And Sergt. William S. Buckwalter, operating the Bolling Air Force base tower across the river at the time, said it was definitely "Bolicia, Bolivia, Bolivia."

The theory that a third aircraft was in the vicinity has given rise to still further contradictions.

A Bolling B-25 made a "simulated instrument landing" over the north-south runway at National Airport sometime before the crash. National Airport witnesses say it was at 11:43 and that the collision was at 11:46 a. m. The B-25 crew and Buckwalter say the crash couldn't have been made later than 11:38—probably at 11:33—and that the crash was at 11:48 a. m.

There was a C-60 Lockhead Lodestar somewhere on the airport when the Bolivian approached, according to testimony. Tigner said one landed about two minutes before the P-38 departed at 11:37 a. m.

But whether Bridoux meant that plane or still another when he supposedly saw "No. 1" has not been determined.

The B-25 crew testified they did not see the P-38 at any time during their flight, and Bridoux said he doesn't think the plane that confused him was a B-25.

Another conflict was renewed Saturday when B. H. Griffin, director of National Airport, said he saw Bridoux use Runway No. 36 on the take-off for his ill-fated test flight.

This jibed with the pilot's description of his departure, but disagreed sharply with that of tower operators, who said he used No. 3.

These are only a few of the many discrepancies that have cropped up in the hearings.

There are others, such as contention by Bridoux that he notified the tower in advance to give him directions by visual signals if his radio failed. Controllers say he did not.

And the testimony that Bridoux radioed he was having engine trouble, a message that controllers say they never heard.

And the relative position of the P-38 and the DC-4 in the traffic pattern over the airport before their death plunge.

And the speed and rate of descent of the two planes as they converged at 300 feet over the Potomac River, hard by Mount Vernon hwy. and less than a mile south of the airport.

Hearings begin at 9:30 a. m. in the Interdepartmental Auditorium board room, Constitution ave., between 13th and 14th sts. nw.

Barkley Plane Barely Misses Blimp

vertising purposes, was known to be in the air at the time the event reported occurred.

The incident was first disclosed by Columnist Drew Pearson in his Sunday afternoon radio broadcast.

Jack Boettner, veteran blimp pilot who flies the Goodyear craft, The Mayflower, now moored at Hybla Valley Airport near Alexandria, said the blimp was being operated Thursday night by his partner, Walter Massie, of Akron, Ohio.

Massie could not be reached for a statement, although Boettner declared Massie said he did not see a B-17 and was over Baileys Crossroads, Va. (six air miles from the airport) when the near miss occurred.

Massie said the running lights of the blimp were blinking on and off during the entire flight and that at no time did he come within the 5-mile restircted radius of the airport.

T/Sergt. Ted E. Elliott, 30, of 3334 Nichols ave. se., was in the front nose section of the plane. He said the blimp was unlighted until the B-17 passed directly over it. Then he said the blimp lit up all over.

Elmer E. Witten, 29 of 153 Danbury st. sw., copilot of Barkley's plane, declared that as the plane entered the airport traffic pattern just south of the Pentagon, the right wing of the B-17 passed slightly over and within 50 feet of the blimp.

He turned to assistant flight engineer, S/Sergt. Otheller B. Hoke, 39, of Mineral Springs, Tex., behind him and said, "that was close," according to Bolling Base officials.

Hoke also declared he had seen the blimp.

Pilots of both crafts are veterans in their field. Massie, who has flown in the Washington area for nearly 15 years, has logged more than 12,000 hours in the air flying blimps. Humrichouse fled 113 missions in the southwest Pacific during World War II.

Parents Veto Baby's Flight

Brockton, Mass., Nov. 13 (U.P.)—A plan to fly an 18-month-old baby to his parents in Honolulu in care of a former GI baby sitter was called off suddenly tonight—when the parents got wind of it.

The plan was devised by the baby's grandmother. The parents learned of it through a radio broadcast in Hawaii.

Navy Chief Petty Officer Henry von Lick and his wife, who collapsed after she heard the program, telephoned from Honolulu about 5 p. m. (EST) that their son Eric was not to fly to the island "in anybody's care."

Lick told the child's maternal grandmother, Mrs. Gertrude H. Le Febver, that he was getting a 30-day leave December 1 and would come to Brockton with his wife for their baby.

Everett Leland of Stoneham, a 30-year-old ex-GI and self-styled "diaper expert" had been selected from more than 150 applicants for the baby-sitting job.

Von Lick had written Mrs. Le Febver to bring the child to him. Unable to do so, she had a travel agency advertise for a baby-sitter for the trip.

Operation Today

'Blue' Baby Fate Is Put In Balance

Today is the day Claude Sine puts himself in the balance for a chance at a normal life.

Claude, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard R. Sine, of Mount Falls, Va., has lived his life thus far under a sentence of early death because of a heart malformation.

Claude Sine

This morning, doctors at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore will attempt by surgical skill to rectify natures mistake.

With him into the operating room will go the prayers of his family and of the little Virginia farming community where he grew up—denied the normal pursuits of boyhood because of the birth defect in his heart. A narrowing of a main artery kept the oxygen level in his blood far below the body's normal needs.

Although he and his family know full well the hazards inevitably associated with the major heart surgery, the Sine boy has been waiting for nearly a year for the operation date to be set.

Late last November he went to Hopkins for a series of tests to determine whether or not he could be helped by the famous Hopkins operation that has saved hundreds of "blue" babies (so called because the lack of oxygen gives a bluish tinge to their faces) from sudden death.

The tests showed it might help him but that he was not a perfect candidate. Strangely enough, this decision was based on the fact that his heart was more nearly normal than the usual subject for this operation.

The doctors feared that an inner heart defect found in most of these cases, but absent in Claude's case, might throw an unbearable burden on his heart after the operation.

Because Claude was not critically ill, the operation was postponed in the hope researchers might develop an operation better fitted to his case.

Usually, the operation consists of surgical construction of a "detour" around the narrowing stricture. In his case, a direct attack on the stricture itself seemed more suitable.

Today, that attack will be undertaken.

Clothing, Soap Gifts Urged

The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, yesterday urged Roman Catholics to support a Thanksgiving clothing and soap collection November 20-27.

In a pastoral letter read in all churches of the Archdiocese, the Archbishop pointed out that more than 11 million war refugees in Europe and the Far and Near East are in need of American help.

The collection will be held from November 20 through 27 throughout the Nation under the auspices of the War Relief Services-National Catholic Welfare Conference. Collection centers, scheduled to be open both day and evening, will be established in every church in this area.

Mission Attracts 3500 to Cathedral

In spite of a drenching rainfall, more than 3500 persons last night crowded into the Washington Cathedral for the opening of the Bryan Green Mission.

The mission, to be conducted by the Rev. Bryan Green of Birmingham, England, will continue through next Monday with services each evening at 8.

Officials of the diocese said the crowd of worshipers was the greatest since the Right Rev. Angus Dun was consecrated five years ago. Young people perched on the ornate carved pulpit at the right and sat on the steps leading up to the altar.

Others sat on the gallery stairs, and ushers reported that all of the chapels and crypts of the Cathedral were also filled.

For half an hour before the mission service began, the congregation joined in singing well-known hymns while Mr. Green circulated among it accepting questions from persons under 35 years of age.

In his sermon, Mr. Green declared that the world has reached a real crisis in history, and said that the struggle is not primarily economic or intellectual, but spiritual and moral.

It is "profoundly possible," he declared, that a secular kind of society, "call it communism, atheism, secularism or humanism," interested only in materialism, which leaves God entirely out, can come to the United States, England and Europe.

Christendom, he said, has lost its faith. "Though we take off our hats to God, God is no longer in our hearts," he declared.

"A decaying Christianity is being replaced by a vital religion of communism which is trying to shape the world in materialism, leaving out the spiritual things," Mr. Green asserted.

Pointing out that Christianity and communism are absolutely opposed in inner philosophy, the missioner declared that we must not just be "anti-Red, but pro-Christianity."

Only a "total, militant faith in Christ," he said, will answer the rival religion in the world today.

In addition to conducting the mission at the Cathedral, Mr. Green will speak at noon today through Thursday at the Church of the Epiphany, 1317 G st. nw., under the auspices of the Washington Federation of Churches.

Hospital Group to Meet Today

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 13.—Personnel of hospitals large and small in Maryland, the District and Delaware will meet here Monday in first annual Tri-State Assembly.

The annual meeting, first since the Maryland-District of Columbia Hospital Association voted last year to re-form with Delaware hospitals into a tri-State organization, opens at 10 a. m., at Hotel duPont.

Dr. A. R. Shands, general chairman on arrangements, has estimated that about 400 hospital workers from administrators down through the ranks of the semi-skilled, will attend the two-day conclave. He is director of the Alfred I. duPont Institute for Crippled Children, here.

Drs. Hawley, MacLean to Talk

Principal speakers at Monday's opening general session will be Drs. Paul R. Hawley, chief executive officer of the Blue Cross-Blue Shields Commissions, and Basil MacLean, director of Strong Memorial Hospital, Rochester, N. Y.

Dr. Hawley is scheduled to speak on the topic, "Blue Cross Protects the People—Who Protects Blue Cross?" Dr. MacLean will discuss the "Rochester Plan," which dovetails hospital services of metropolitan areas in with rural health services of surrounding communities.

The convention activities, however, will largely be confined to sectional meetings, including sessions for hospital nurse-anesthetists, medical technologists, dieticians, accountants, medical records librarians, executive housekeepers, hospital pharmacists and hospital purchasing personnel.

Sectional speakers include Dr. George J. Thomas of Pittsburgh, Pa., on "Explosion Hazards in the Operating Room"; Miss Charlotte Campbell, bacteriologist, Army Medical Center, Washington, D. C., on "The Isolation and Identification of Pathogenic Fungi," and Dr. Nathan W. Shock, chief of cardiovascular disorders and gerontology section, United States Public Health Service, on "Broadening Horizons in Gerontology."

Leo G. Schmelzer, administrator of Garfield Memorial Hospital, Washington, D. C., will be installed Monday as president. He succeeds Benjamin W. Wright, superintendent of Memorial Hospital, Cumberland, Md., who was president of the Maryland-District of Columbia Hospital Association.

Twenty-seven supply firms have contracted for space to show their products in 30 exhibit booths, Dr. Shands said. On display will be equipment for administration of anesthesia, hospital food service, surgical supplies, laundry machinery and the host of other necessities for complete and successful operation of a hospital.

Workers in the 1950 Community Chest campaign, ahead of last year but still far from their goal, will reexamine their efforts at a series of report meetings this week.

Business II Unit, which on Saturday had reached 39 percent of its goal of $241,781, will meet today in the Mural Room of the Washington Hotel at 12:20 p. m.

Leaders in the unit hope that weekend efforts will lead to reports of a sizable rise in both the number of pledges and total amount promised for the social agencies.

Aaron Goldman, unit chairman, will preside; the Army Medical Center Band, led by Sergt. Michael DeCesar, will play, and the DC Keys, a barber shop quartet, will sing.

Captains to Be Commended

Gest of honor from a recipient social agency will be 16-year-old Ann Richert, 210 N. Oakland st., Arlington. She is a student at Washington and Lee High School and has been active in the YWCA's Y-Teen groups for three years.

Captains of Business II subunits will be seated at the head table and commended for their efforts.

On Tuesday, the Residential Unit will have luncheon at the Washington Room of the Washington Hotel and Business I Unit in the Mural Room of the same hotel.

Miss Mary Haworth, Washington Post columnist on human problems, will address the Residential Unit luncheon. Mrs. Theodore O. Wedel, unit chairman, has announced that her workers will try to bring in a total of 80 percent of their quota of $331,350. This group had reported up to Saturday a total of 52.28 percent of its goal.

John A. Reilly, president of the Second National Bank and former president of the Washington Board of Trade, will address the Business I luncheon, with Maurice Nee, vice chairman of the unit, presiding.

A Government unit luncheon originally scheduled for Tuesday has been postponed because of the long holiday weekend for Government workers. Instead, it will bring in its new totals at the general report luncheon Thursday at the Hall of Nations Room at the Washington Hotel.

Parade Scheduled Thursday

This luncheon will be preceded by a parade, the third in a series highlighting Red Feather agencies. The procession will form at 12th st. and Constitution ave. nw. and, march down Pennsylvania ave. to the Washington Hotel at noon. It will be headed by the Metropolitan Police Band and the Marine Drum and Bugle Corps.

To stress the need for greater citizen responsibility in meeting social needs, the seven Neighborhood Councils, sponsored by United Community Services, will hold a joint, fifteenth anniversary meeting at 8 p. m. Tuesday. The session will be at the Washington Gas Light Co. auditorium, 11th and H sts. nw.

Speakers will be Dr. John Rustin, pastor of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, and Hugh Smith, principal of Jefferson Junior High School.

The first of the seven councils was organized in Southwest Washington in 1934, as a result of recommendations at the White House Conference for Children, and others followed. Though the entire city is not yet covered by such neighborhood councils, the coordinating committee for them has received requests to form a number of others.

Red Feather drive officials announced yesterday receipt of an unexpected and unsolicited check for $115 from staff members of Care, the nonprofit organization for transmission of food, clothing and other relief to Europe.

Interfraternity Conference Will Open Here Nov. 24

The forty-first annual session of the National Interfraternity Conference will be held at the Mayflower Hotel November 24 through 26.

The conference is being held in Washington for the first time. Municipal Court Judge Frank H. Myers, a member of the Kappa Alpha order, will serve as chairman.

Each of the 56 college social fraternities in the federation will send three delegates and two alternates. There will also be 250 undergraduates representing interfraternity councils on 150 college campuses.

An informal stag smoker will open the conference November 24. Panel discussions will be held the next day and a banquet and ball that night. The conference will close with business sessions November 26.

Hopkins House Suffers From Lack of Space

HOPKINS HOUSE at 1312 Princess st., Alexandria, Va., a Community Chest Agency, provides supervised recreation and arts and crafts instruction for children of the neighborhood. The boys take great delight in making things in the wood-working shop under direction of Robert Burke. Burke, a War Department clerical worker, spends two hours, four nights a week teaching the youngsters how to use various tools, including a wood-turning lathe and drill press. Here Leroy L. Butler, 8, of 1214 Princess st., cuts out something with a scroll saw while Lawrence Jackson, 8, of 322 Paine st., tries to guess what it will be when finished

By Robert P. Jordan
Post Reporter

Beneath the gaiety that rings through Hopkins House, where children play for hours on end, is a deeper note.

It strikes home when you learn that many of the youngsters come there simply to find a place to keep warm when winter comes to Alexandria. It is the voice, too, of the place itself, for like these children, Hopkins House must make do.

Hopkins House is Alexandria's Red Feather settlement house for Negro children. That is how Mrs. Connie B. Chissell, its executive secretary, describes it. It is one of four agencies now trying to meet the social needs of the city's estimated 7000 to 8000 Negroes.

At most, Mrs. Chissell reports, Hopkins House can handle only 40 youngsters at a time. For some of them, she says, "Trouble is brewing."

First thing they know, if she can swing it, they are off the streets and in the house, doing what they like to do under adult supervision.

Other youngsters, though, "use the house as a place to live until their parents come home," she says. "In winter they come in to keep warm."

Once inside, the children, willy-nilly, usually start to take an interest in one or more of the activities.

Sometimes several girls will form a group for crocheting. "They may end up just talking," to quote Mrs. Chissell, "but they're in here talking, instead of on the street . . ."

If you walk into the decaying two-story frame building at 1312 Princess st. about 4 p. m. on a Tuesday, say, you'll find 12 or 15 little girls busy drawing and sewing, chattering away for dear life.

And, because they are Brownies, you'd have heard Mrs. Ruth H. Wright, the house's girls worker, chide one of them:

"Now, young lady, did you know you aren't supposed to wear your Brownie cap unless you're wearing the rest of your uniform?"

Around 6 p. m., had you stayed, you'd have seen a number of young boys troop into the house. In a minute or so your ears would have been assaulted by the sounds of a small basement workshop in full operation. They were making shoe racks, bookshelves, lamps, jewelry boxes.

But instead of 10 boys—there would be 50 down there if there were room, says Mrs. Chissell.

A battered piano in the front room, a sagging sofa, a couple of easy chairs and a scarred radio—that's the music room. Upstairs is an auditorium and the library-sewing room.

There is a kitchen, where cooking classes are held, on the first floor. The back yard, a small, fenced plot of pounded earth, serves for outdoor recreation. It is smaller than a badminton court.

This is the Hopkins House, a Community Chest affiliate. While its work is aimed primarily at children, it is also the center of many adult activities.

Hopkins House is named after the late Dr. J. Milton Hopkins, a Negro physician who worked to better the living conditions of his race. The house was established in 1939 through the efforts of a small group of citizens now banded together as the Hopkins House Association.

Many of the founders continue to give their time, teaching classes, supervising activities in general. The house depends almost entirely on volunteers for Mrs. Chissell and Mrs. Wright, both with the house since its beginning, are the only paid personnel.

6 Medical Groups to Aid Health

New York, Nov. 13 (AP). — Six large professional associations, representing thousands of doctors, dentists, nurses, and hospital, welfare and public health officials, have formed a joint committee to discuss methods of improving the Nation's health.

New York City Welfare Commissioner Raymond M. Hillard, spokesman for the committee, said today representatives met here over the week-end and organized the Inter-Association Committee on Health.

Participating organizations are the American Medical Association, American Dental Association, American Hospital Association, American Nurses Association, American Public Health Association and American Public Welfare Association.

Dr. Philip E. Adams of Boston, president of the American Dental Association, served as chairman at the first session. He said:

"It is to be hoped that this group, representing large associations of national character, can present a united front on many of the problems that affect the health and welfare of the American people."

Asked by a reporter whether the new group was concerned with socialized medicine, Hilliard said, "that topic hasn't even come up."

Noted Throat Specialists report on 30-Day Test of Camel Smokers...
NOT ONE SINGLE CASE OF THROAT IRRITATION due to smoking CAMELS!

I DIDN'T NEED THE DOCTOR'S WORD FOR IT. CAMEL MILDNESS AGREED WITH MY THROAT FROM THE VERY FIRST PUFF! THEY'RE A GREAT SMOKE!
CAMEL
TURKISH & DOMESTIC BLEND CIGARETTES
PERSONNEL DIRECTOR,
Robert Lamkie
One of the hundreds of people from coast to coast who made the 30-Day Camel Mildness Test. His throat specialist's report: NO SIGN OF THROAT IRRITATION due to smoking Camels.
Yes, these were the findings of noted throat specialists after a total of 2,470 weekly examinations of the throats of hundreds of men and women who smoked Camels—and only Camels—for 30 consecutive days.

Housewife Mrs. M. Kinney, who made the test, reports: "Camels agreed with my throat from the start!"

"Yes, I made the 30-day test. Camels make smoking a real day-to-day pleasure!" Ann O'Rourke, secretary.

"30 days of smoking Camels taught me how mild and good-tasting a cigarette can be!" G. Manley, bobsledder.

Singer Judith Doniger: "My doctor's report was good news to my throat! Camels suit me to a 'T'!"

Vaughn Monroe, orchestra leader: "Camels are my cigarette! Camels have a full, rich flavor."
"Camels agree with my throat!"

"Yes, I had my throat examined every week. For mildness—the answer is Camel!" Tod Crone, travel agent.

"My doctor's report proved what my throat told me about Camels. They're mild!" Edith Stromberg, teacher.

"I'm delighted to find such a good-tasting cigarette! It's Camels from now on!" Marylee Hahn, college student.

Traffic Manager Ed Liman: "I made the test. It introduced me to the mildest cigarette I ever smoked—Camel!"

Benay Venuta, recording artist: "Looks like my 30-Day Test will add up to years of enjoyment!"

Start your own 30-Day Camel MILDNESS test today!
IT'S FUN! Smoke Camels—and only Camels—for 30 days. Compare them in your "T-Zone" (T for taste, T for throat). Let your throat tell you about Camel's cool mildness. Let your taste tell you about Camel's wonderful flavor.

Redskins Take Another Lacing From Eagles, 44-21

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

GRIFFITH STADIUM, Nov. 13.—The Redskins take the field for their debut under new coach Herman Ball, who is getting no break from the schedule-makers. Present also are the Philadelphia Eagles, added to the habit of running up 40 points on the Redskins at the sound of the opening whistle.

POVICH

7-0, Eagles. The opening whistle sounded two minutes and 50 seconds ago. Steve Van Buren ran past a lot of Redskins. left some tracks on the stomach of Dick Poillon at the 35-yard line and took the ball to the Redskin 27. Frank Ziegler took it 22 yards more, and oh, Bosh Pritchard got the touchdown.

Harry Gilmer sets the Redskins' passing attack in motion, and the Eagles, too. His first effort is completed—to Joe Muha of the Eagles on the Redskin 28. The Eagles settle for a field goal attempt by Patton that is short.

Touchdown, Redskins. Gilmer brings up his passing average nicely with a 28-yard pitch to Sandifer, and then a 32-yard heave to Pete Stout, who out-crafts Harry Craft with a slick maneuver on the 5-yard line, and is home free.

DENOTE THE PASSING of 1 minute 29 seconds any way you like. Anyway, the Eagles have another touchdown. Thompson pitched one to Clyde Scott that covered 70 yards. There was a little business of shaking Tommy Mont off on the Redskin 20, but that didn't take long and the rest of the play was Scott-free.

Credit Coach Greasy Neale of the Eagles with that touchdown. No coach ever made a more inspired substitution. He sends Scott into the game as Pritchard's replacement just before the scoring pass materializes.

No less than a dozen Eagles were reported suffering from colds, according to publicity man Ed Hogan, who wondered publicly all week what horrible fate might be in store today for the league champions. At this point, Redskin Coach Ball is inquiring what might be the brand of the Eagles' cough drops.

Scott's free again, this time on a 39-yard sprint around left end. Ed Berrang has him behind the scrimmage line but winds up with a handful of nothing and a mouthful of sod.

STEVE VAN BUREN tries fo ra first down on the Redskin 18, but even Stephen can't make it, so the Eagles settle for a field goal by Patton from the 28. 17-7, Eagles.

Sammy Baugh takes over the Redskins' passing attack, with the upshot that the Redskins punt. And now the Eagles are getting downright strategic with Thompson completing a 35-yard pass to Van Buren, of all people. That amounts to a trick play.

23-7, Eagles. Jack Ferrante, Eagle end, leaves the Redskins to ponder the advantages of a college education. Ferrante, who missed out on higher learning and went to the Eagles direct from the Philadelphia sandlots, just takes a pass from Thompson for 14 yards and a touchdown.

Redskin fans may not like the way matters are developing, but they have the consolation of seeing history made. Cliff Patton just misses a point after touchdown for the first time since November, 1946, and his consecutive streak is halted at 84.

30-7, EAGLES. PIHOS catches Thompson's pass on the 10, wrenches away from Sandifer and moves to the Redskin 3. At that point, Van Buren needs two shots at the line before going over, which is under his private par for the distance.

Gilmer gets away a long pass into Eagle territory, and on the same play blossoms as a defensive star of the Redskins. Forty-three yards after, Frank Reagan intercepts the pitch. Gilmer makes the tackle on the Redskins' 12 to save a touchdown.

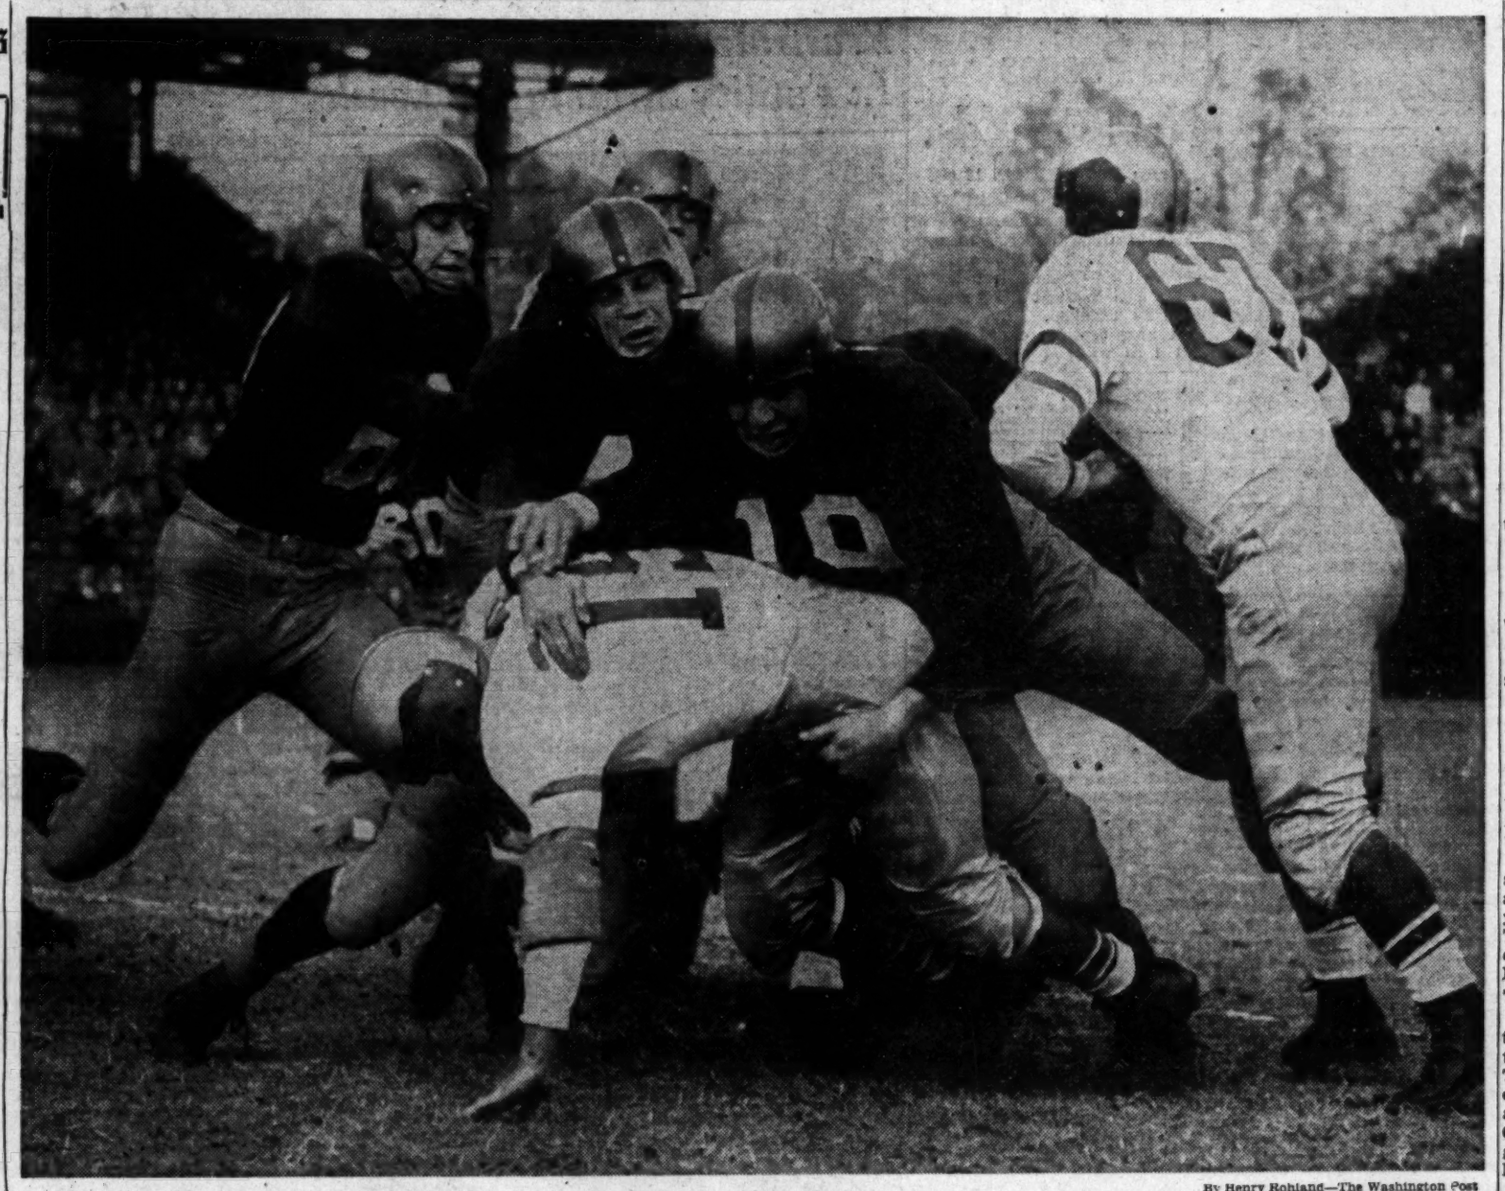
But not for long. It's 37-7, Eagles. Thompson, on fourth down, finds Pete Pihos, waiting and eager, on the goal line and pitches him the leather loaf for an 8-yard scoring play.

37-14. Touchdown, Redskins. Gilmer gets off two beauts, to Dowda, and then to Dowda again, the last covering 21 yards. He is wearing Eagles around his neck like lavaliers when he completes both heaves.

44-14. TOUCHDOWN, EAGLES. Needing 10 yards for a first down, Thompson pitches a 15-yarder to Ferrante, who gives Sandifer the slip on the 3-yard line and falls on his touchdown-minded face in the end zone.

Touchdown, Redskins, and it's 44-21. Gilmer's at it again with a long-distance heave to Taylor and the play covers 61 yards, but not the embarrassment of Dick Humbert who lets Taylor get away on the 20.

With 36 seconds of the game remaining, the Redskins can be said to be in foul shape unless they can think up a quick 23-point touchdown. And their situation is further complicated by the fact they don't even have the ball.



By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

FIVE AGAINST ONE—It took almost half of the Redskin team to stop Steve Van Buren, of the Philadelphia Eagles, on this play yesterday at Griffith Stadium. Five of the Redskins are ganging up on the powerful halfback here, but he succeeded in gaining 7 yards before finally being brought down. Jim Peebles (19) has a firm grasp on Van Buren while Herb Siegert, Len Szafaryn, John Steber and a hidden Redskin join in. No. 67 is Eagle's John Magee

Thompson Tosses Four Touchdowns For Champs

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

The Redskins showed some improvement yesterday, but the Philadelphia Eagles again put their championship form on display.

When their Griffith Stadium argument was over, the Eagles had a 44-21 pull in points, their seventh National Football League triumph in eight games, and a clear road to their third straight Eastern division title.

Washington's proudest boast, in the debut of Herman Ball as head coach, was that it held the champs to a margin of 12 points less than in the earlier get-together of the teams.

STATISTICS

Washington		Philadelphia

The largest crowd of their season, 31,170 fans, saw the Redskins absorb their fourth licking this year. Most of them acclaimed Tommy Thompson, a veteran of eight years in pro action, as the Eagles, man of the hour.

Thompson Passes Connect

The old Tulsa ace threw four touchdown passes, enough to beat the Redskins, on plays covering 70, 14, 8 and 15 yards. Eight more of his 21 aerials were complete, amassing 269 yards for Coach Greasy Neale's club, without a single interception charged against him.

But it was the Eagle running attack which sealed off the Redskins' last championship hopes of '49. Bruising runners like Steve Van Buren, with 96 yards in 18 trips, and fancy Dans like Clyde Scott and Bosh Pritchard, with a combined mileage of 94 yards in 16 trips, gave Philadelphia a 256-to-851yard edge along the ground.

Actually, the Eagles "failed" in two important matters.

Their first fizzle was charged to Cliff Patton, placement expert, whose string of consecutive conversions was broken at 84 in the second period. After the Eagles' third touchdown, Rob Goode plowed prematurely into the extra-point effort, and following an offside penalty Patton's boot was to the left.

It was his first miss since November 16, 1947, in a game with the Boston Yanks. He made up for it with five successful conversions and a second-quarter field goal.

Eagles Down Punts

The second "failure" tied a NFL record that has stood since 1934. Not a single Eagle punt used—or needed—to tie the mark of the New York Giants against the Chicago Bears. The Eagles either scored or tied for a field goal every time they had the ball until Pritchard fumbled away a scoring drive on the opening play of the final period.

One fourth-down pass by Bill Mackrides was intercepted and two others fell short from the Redskin 12 and 19 later in the quarter.

Against Thompson the Redskins tried to match Harry Gilmer, rookie from Alabama, and the comparison wasn't too unhappy. Lil' Harry dreamed up a pair of touchdown passes, covering 39 and 61 yards, and he came within 5 yards of Thompson's total gain.

A big difference, however, was that Gilmer had five of his 24

Cards' 65-20 Victory Sets Point Mark

New York, Nov. 13 (AP).—Chicago's hard-running Cardinals flattened the New York Bulldogs, 65-20, today, scoring nine touchdowns, eight extra points and a field goal to pile up the highest point total ever achieved in a regular season game of the National Football League.

The 65 points surpassed the previous season record of 64 set by Philadelphia against Cincinnati on November 6, 1934. Spectacular as it was, the performance fell short of the league high of 73 points scored by the Chicago Bears against the Washington Redskins in the championship playoff of December 8, 1940.

Chicago		New York
31	First downs	19
319	Net yards gained rushing	139

17	Forward passes completed	15
253	Yards forward passing	254
7	Forwards intercepted by	1
0	Opponents' fumbles recovered	0
75	Yards lost by penalties	20

Jim Hardy and Paul Cristman each tossed three touchdown passes for the Cards while Pat Harder, fullback, tallied 23 points on two touchdowns, 8 extra points and a field goal.

The Bulldogs also took a serious drubbing at the box office. Only 9072 paying customers rattled around the spacious Polo Grounds.

The game was played under skies so dark you could hardly see across the field before the lights were turned on in the third period.

The Cards put the game away in the second quarter with 31 points. Hardy hurled one touchdown pass to Charlie Trippi for 19 yards in the first period, another to Bill Dewell for 25 in the second and a third to Mal Kutner for 12 just before halftime.

Harder slammed over from 2 yards out to end an 86-yard Cardinal drive in the second period and later in the same quarter he rambled 43 yards to score.

His field goal, a 12-yarder, also came in the second period. Harder missed one conversion attempt, after the eighth Card marker, ending a string of 81 consecutive extra points dating back to 1947.

Christman took over for Hardy after the intermission and threw touchdown passes of 12 yards to Bob Ravensberg, 2 yards to Vic Schwall and 23 yards to John Cochran. Cochran also ran 22 yards for the last Cardinal score.

The Bulldog's matched Chicago's first-period score when Joe Golding took a 12-yard pass from Layne at the end of a 75-yard march. Layne's passing set up a third period Bulldog touchdown, scored by Frank Muehlheuser from a yard out.

New York	7	0	6	7	—20

New York: Touchdowns—Golding, Muehlheuser Rauch. Points after touchdowns—Scollard (2).

'He's a Bad Sport', Tatum's Reply to Donelli's Blast

Criticism of Dixie Officials by B. U. Coach Irks Jim

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

IT MAY be all right for a Southerner to challenge the integrity of another Southerner, but when a Yankee does, it usually leads to war, oral or otherwise.

And that's exactly what we have on our hands this morning with Jim Tatum, of Maryland University, and Buff Donelli, of Boston University, hauling out their verbal guns.

Donelli fired the first shot after Tatum's Terrapins had handed his Terriers their first defeat, 14-13, in Boston.

Boston papers reported Donelli as saying "the officials stole the game from us . . . I don't mind getting burned by officials playing in the South, but when they give you the business on your home field it hurts plenty. I'll never have Southern officials again."

WITH his McColl, South Carolina, dander at a new high, Tatum hauled off and let go with this:

"Donelli is a bad sport. What he said about Southern officials is rank discrimination. If he mistrusts Southern officials, then he must also mistrust Southern football teams and if that's the case I'm sure he'll find it difficult to schedule one again."

Donelli, so confident of a victory over the Terps that he invited 'Gator Bowl scouts to be B. U.'s guests at Saturday's game, charged that the referree, H. V. Hooper, of V.P.I., "was too old to referee" and that Head Linesman Bee Harper of South Carolina, "took charge of the ball game."

(Editor's note: The two Southern officials were assigned by the Southern Conference and the two Eastern officials, the umpire and field judge, by the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference.)

Maryland Mentor Labels Remarks 'Discriminatory'

WHAT ANGERED Donnelli most was the failure of the officials to credit Boston University with a first down inside the Maryland 5-yard line in the third period, with the Terriers leading 13-7.

Only inches separated B. U. from a first down with two plays to go. Maryland took over the ball on downs.

"The teams were piled up. Nobody could tell where the ball was until the players were unpiled. But the head linesman marked the spot for the referee before the players were untangled.

"How could he tell where the ball was on a pile up? He knew where the stakes were, but not the ball."

"That's absurd," was Tatum's reply. "How could the referee tell where the ball was? He's behind the offensive team and the head linesman was at the line of scrimmage. Isn't it logical that he saw where the ball was?

"AND if that's Donelli's beef I have one to match it. That same head linesman called a holding play on Jimmy LaRue (Maryland defensive halfback) which moved the ball for B. U. from our 15 to the 4 and set up a B. U. touchdown. The man in position to best see if there was any holding or not, the umpire stationed behind the defensive team, didn't call a thing.

"I've had my differences with officials, but I've never aired them publicly. It's getting so now that when a coach loses and has no excuses, he takes it out on officials.

"I said we were lucky to win the game and I meant it. Whichever team won that game was lucky, and we were simply fortunate enough to have Bob Dean kick the extra point that won for us."

Donelli said, "It it's the Civil War, let's fight it out, but not that way."

Bears Beat Out Detroit By 27 to 24

By Charles Chamberlain

Chicago, Nov. 13 (AP).—The Chicago Bears shook off the effects of three touchdown pitches by Frank Tripucka—two of them in the last period—to edge the Detroit Lions, 27-24, in a National Football League aerial battle today.

Despite the Lions' defeat—their seventh in eight league starts—they salvaged some glory in Tripucka's passing margin in a duel with the Bears' Johnny Lujack.

The two former Notre Dame quarterbacks squared off in a spectacular pitching bout which kept

Steelers Tie Rams, 7-All, In Mudfest

Pittsburgh, Nov. 13 (AP).—The heavily favored Los Angeles Rams avoided a stunning upset today by pushing over a touchdown with 24 seconds left to gain a 7-7 tie with thePittsburgh Steelers before 20,510 on rain-bogged Forbes Field.

Fred Gehrke cracked over from 1 yard out on second down to score the touchdown and Quarterback Bob Waterfield booted the placement which meant the tie. The Steelers scored in the second period and clung doggedly to the lead until the Rams last desperate drive from the Los Angeles 41.

Breaks Save Rams

Two unique breaks—one a penalty against them—probably saved Los Angeles from defeat by a club rated a 14½-point underdog.

In the third period, a bad pass from Center Don Paul sailed far over Waterfield's head as the Ram ace was back to punt. Steeler Tackle Carl Samuelson picked up the ball on the Ram 25 and made

Not a Single Pass!

Pittsburgh, Nov. 13.—The Pittsburgh Steelers remained absolutely earth-bound in gaining their 7-all tie with the Los Angeles Rams here today. They equalled a National Football League record by failing to throw a single pass with the mid-greased ball.

Santa Clara Downs Gaels, 19-6

San Francisco, Nov. 13 (AP).—Santa Clara's Broncos defeated their oldest football rivals, St. Mary's Gaels, 19-6, in the thirtieth "Little Big Game" today.

A crowd of 37,640 saw Coach Len Casanova's hard-charging Broncos score two touchdowns in the first period and another in the second.

John Carroll Whips Canisius

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 13 (AP).—John Carroll University with Carl Taseff personally carrying for 235 yards, defeated Canisius 26-12 today for its fifth football victory in eight starts.

John Carroll scored all its touchdowns at the tag end of lengthy drives, with Taseff tallying one and reeling off repeated gains of 10 to 15 yards.

Coach Can 'Gas' to Player

The Game's Getting So Crazy Even the Pigskin Talks Back

Los Angles, Nov. 13 (AP).—Science has now invaded the gridiron with a talking football.

All you do is fill the pigskin with ammonium gas, install a transmitter under the coach's overcoat and your quarterback becomes more of a robot than he is already.

This monster is the work of Dr. W. D. Hershberger, atomic engineer at the University of California at Los Angles.

It enables the coach to maintain continuous communication with the ball handler—without benefit of wires or the free substitution rule. Worse, the rule book doesn't cope with the situation.

Hershberger says the gadget works via the absorption of microwave radio signals by the ammonia molecules. An earpiece filled with the gas may be placed in the quarterback's helmet. Better yet, simply pump the gas into the football.

Then, when the ballcarrier fades back to pitch one, he hears his coach scream:

"Szalubritzky, you idiot! Run through that hole at right tackle!"

Or, when an opposing safety man gathers speed on a punt return, the football emits an outraged squeal:

"Stop it, Herman! You're hurting me!"

It's enough to make the strongest man fumble.

Metro League Results

Langdon Blanks Eastern; Wasco Bows to Riverside

The Langdon Lions virtually clinched the Eastern division 160-pound title in the Metropolitan Amateur Football League yesterday with a 22-0 win over Eastern A. C., defending champion.

It was Langdon's sixth straight and Eastern's first loss and gave Langdon a game and a half lead.

The Riverside Rollers took over undisputed possession of first place in the Western division, trouncing Wasco Bullets, 19-0. The Southwest Merchants had a bye.

Phil Caruso scored the first Lion touchdown on an 11-yard end run in the opening period. Bob Burlingame's conversion was good. Langdon scored two touchdowns in the third period. Bill "Lefty" Burlingame tossed a screen pass to Kenny Davis and End Warren Thompson intercepted an Eastern aerial for the second score. Bill Burlingame passed to Thompson for the point.

John Murphy's passes to end Jack Callahan were good for three touchdowns in Brookland-Woodbridge's 31-6 defeat of Great Falls. Jake Jacobs and Eddie Brand each scored on the ground to complete the rout. Great Falls' touchdown came on the last play on Sonny Gray's interception of a Merchants pass.

Casbah Restaurant and Arrow Linen battled to a 6-6 deadlock in the fourth Metro League game. Casbah scored in the first period on a Bumps Vaughan pass to Bill Peters, and the Linemen tied it in the third quarter on Bob Redding's aerial to Ed Cauthers.

Charley's 15 Passes Net 345 Yds.

Green Bay, Wis., Nov. 13 (AP).—Chuckin' Charley Conerly pitched four touchdown passes, three of them to Gene Roberts, to give the New York Giants a 30-10 victory over Green Bay today in a National Football League game at City Stadium.

A near capacity crowd of 20,151 fans watched the punchless Packers close their home season with their sixth loss in eight games.

Conerly connected on nine of 16 passes in the first half for 199 yards and hit on six of 13 in the second for 146.

Gene (Choo-Choo) Roberts was his favorite target, grabbing three touchdown passes. Bill Swiacki glued onto the other with a jumping catch in the end zone corner. Ben Agajanian added a field goal and three extra points.

The Packers counted a field goal in the second period on Ted Fritsch's 27-yard boot and a touchdown in the final session on Ralph Earhart's 57-yard return of a punt. Fritsch added the extra point.

The Conerly-Roberts combo clicked at the end of the opening period, Charley tossing 20 yards and Roberts scooting 25 more for the touchdown. Agajanian added his field goal moments later from the 31-yard line.

New York scored again in the second half, Conerly whipping 41 yards to Roberts for this one. A little later the same deal worked again, Roberts catching a six-yard pitch and adding three more yards for the score.

Swiacki got into the act in the final quarter immediately following Roberts' scoring burst. This time the Giants drove 83 yards, with Conerly's pass again the payoff in the end zone as Swiacki outjumped two Green Bay defenders.

After 11 Years of Glory

Frustrated Justice Study In Futility Straining at Leash

Choo-Choo Begged Snavely 3 Times For Chance to Get Into Game

UNWITNESSED BY most of the 67,000 spectators at Yankee Stadium was a sideline drama every bit as spectacular as the Notre Dame-North Carolina game itself.

Choo-Choo Charlie Justice, who had highlighted practically every Tar Heel game in the last four years, was the leading role in this one also, but in a different way.

Shackled to the bench by a crippling ankle injury which forced him to miss the most important game of his fabulous career, Carolina's All-America halfback had to be restrained from rushing into the game at least five times.

Huddled in a hood and pacing up and down the sidelines, Justice, out of combination of habit and courage, made several abortive attempts to rush out on the field. Each time, however, an assistant coach or teammate would halt him, reminding him anew that doctors had forbidden his play.

HE GOT TO MAKE one token appearance, limping out to hold the ball for the extra point kick after the Tar Heels had stunned the crowd to say nothing of the Irish, by grabbing a 6-0 lead in the first two minutes. He bobbled the snap from center.

"I was the loneliest person in the world," the dejected 165-pound star said last night from Chapel Hill, N. C., "I had an empty feeling that I wasn't doing my share and I wanted to contribute something to the game. But our gang gave 'em hell as long as we could.

"I asked Coach Snavely three times to put me in, but he said no that he wouldn't take a chance of having me crippled for life. It's a disheartening thing to play 11 years of football and then have to miss the one game you wanted to play in most of all.

"I've been lucky in that this is my first serious injury. If I got hurt this badly the first time I really got hurt maybe my number is up. I've said it before and I'll say it again and I mean it: I won't play pro ball.

"I'm 25 and I want to coach . . . I really mean it. My wife worries about me when I play, and 11 years of football is enough for anyone."

How much difference would there have been in the ball game had Justice been hale and hearty?

"Maybe none," he said, "but I'd like to have had a chance."

MORRIS SIEGEL

Redskins Laced by Eagles, 44-21

heaves intercepted. Twelve went to the Redskins for whom they were indended. Slingin' Sammy Baugh was used in only three series of plays by the Redskins and completed three passes out of six for 12 yards.

Things started off with the Eagles, three-touchdown favorites, doing just what everyone expected them to do. They romped 80 yards with the opening kickoff, powered for the most part by Van Buren. At the end Pritchard used a bruising block by Jack Myers to get past Howie Livingston and into the corner of the end zone. Only two minutes and 50 seconds had elapsed.

The next time Philadelphia took possession it was forced to try for 3 points from 38 yards out. Patton missed and—surprise! surprise!—the Redskins came back to tie the score at 7-7.

Gilmer's 28-yard strike to Dan Sandifer reached midfield, but at the Eagle 39 Washington was bogged down. It was then that Gilmer got off one of his patented "jump" passes, swiped from the hands of Russ Craft by Pete Stout and carried 5 yards into the end zone.

A kickoff and three plays later Philadelphia was out front, 14-7, never to be headed. Thomson hurled to Scott from back of his own 30, with the Redskins' Herb Shoener far offsides. When Scott broke into the clear he had only Tommy Mont to ocntend with, a feat he accomplished with embarrassing (to Mont) ease 30 yards out. He was trotting at the end of the 70-yard jaunt.

An Eagle touchdown was called back and Patton missed another field goal from the 30 before the count reached 17-7 at 3:25 of the second period. Patton was then kicking from the 28.

Baugh's first handling of the Redskins moved them only to their own 35 before the home team punted and the Eagles started their third touchdown drive from their 32. A Thompson-to-Van Buren pass ate up about half the distance, and the ball had reached the Redskin 14 when Thompson passed the Tribe again.

Jack Ferrante was locked in Goode's arms when he accepted the offering, but he yanked away to make a dive across the goal. That ,along with another Patton conversion, made it 23-7 and removed all remaining doubt of the outcome.

Later came Van Buren's 1-yard score, after Eddie Saenz fumbled on the Redskin 24, to close out the first half. And in the third period there was Thompson's 8-yard scoring toss to Pihos, and his 15-yard payoff pitch to Ferrante, with Dowda's brilliant 21-yard touchdown run sandwiched between.

Washington got in the last lick, anyway. It was delivered after 2:12 of the final period as the result of Pritchard's fumble, recovered by Joe Sobeleski on the Redskin 24.

In three plays Gilmer had the Redskins at their 39, and on the fourth he faded to pass. Hugh (Bones) Taylor had outsped Dick Humbert to grab the ball on the Eagle 22 and he scored standing up on a 61-yard play.

The Redskins' best move thereafter reached the Eagle 48, hardly far enough to overcome a 23-point deficit.

That ended it, although the Eagles made three passing threats in the last stages under the mangement of Bill Mackrides.

49ers Turn Back Dons; Browns and Bills Tie

Second Deadlock Of Season, 7-All

Cleveland, Nov. 13 (AP).—The giant-killer Buffalo Bills fought the championship Cleveland Browns to a 7-7 stalemate in an All-America Football Conference game here today.

The surprise tie came just one week after the pesky Bills booted the New York Yankees from top position in an upset victory. The Browns still keep their grip on the conference lead.

It was the second time this year that the teams have played a tie game. They had a 28-28 deadlock in Buffalo September 5.

Lou Groza's try for a field goal in the last play of the game fell far short. He booted from 51 yards out. Attendance was estimated at 22,000.

The Browns scored early in the game. They kicked off to the Bills, who received on their own 28 and on the first play, a George Ratterman-to-Ollie Cline pass was intercepted by Cleveland back Tony Adamle on the 24.

Graham Scores On Sneak

Otto Graham passed to Horace Gillom for a first down on the 11 and three plays later Graham scored on a quarterback sneak from one inch out. Lou Groza converted.

In the first period, Tommy Colella kicked to Cliff Lewis on the Browns' 24 when the visitors found themselves symied. Lewis signalled for a fair catch and then fumbled, with Odell Stautzenberger recovering. The first quarter ended shortly after, with Buffalo roosting on the Browns' 17.

Chief Mutryn carried the ball to the six and Bumgardner advanced it to the four in the second quarter. Ratterman tried two passes which failed and then Mutryn went around right end for the touchdown. Chet Adams booting the extra point.

In the third period, rain, which had been coming down intermittently all through the contest, started pouring down on the field and the players sloshed around without scoring. The stadium lights had to be turned on.

San Francisco Wins In Last Half, 41-24

By Bob Myers

Los Angeles, Nov. 13 (AP).—The San Francisco '49ers encountered a stiff duel for the first half today, but gathered momentum and rolled on to hand the Los Angeles Dons a 41-to-24 defeat in an All-America Conference football game today before 17,880.

The '49ers took the opening kickoff and marched 71 yards in 10 running plays, with Frankie Albert steering the attack, and scored.

That set the theme of the game—too much San Francisco. Twice in the first half Los Angeles pulled abreast of the pace-setters, but San Francisco held a 21-17 lead at half time.

A long pass, Albert to Joe Perry, good for 57 yards, went for a touchdown and broke a 14-14 tie.

Reserve Back Don Garlin's 60-yard sprint from scrimmage was another long distance scoring feat.

George Taliaferro, Don tailback, passed to Len Ford for 21 yards, ending an 80-yard march that knotted the count at 7-7, and an Albert fumble deep in his own zone set the stage for another Los Angeles touchdown.

As the half ended, Center Bob Nelson of the Dons booted a 43-yard field goal. Then Garlin got off his 60-yard run and San Francisco went on to add two more touchdowns in the fourth.

Billy Rosado, Clayton Head Turner's Card

Billy Rosado, Puerto Rican lightweight, and Irish Pat O'Leary, Chicago featherweight, make their local debuts in two of the four eight-rounders at Turner Arena tonight.

Rosado takes on Marshall Clayton, former All-Army champion, while O'Leary tangles with Little Dynamite. Artie Bethea opposes Holly Mims and Garland Edwards meets Baltimore's Frank Lacey, filling out the card.

The Rosado-Clayton bout shapes up as a real brawl. Clayton is undefeated since turning pro while Rosado has marked up wins over Jimmy Warren and Biff Jones in recent battles.

Little Dynamite has 12 victories in a row since joining the pro ranks but will be up against a ring-wise campaigner in O'Leary.

The Mims-Bethea match is an all-local natural with the winner probably meeting the winner of the Edwards-Lacey match next in an elimination bout to pick an opponent for Sonny Boy Bunn, new local lightweight hotshot.

it to the 5. But a penalty was called against the Rams for delaying the game—an infraction which can't be declined—and Waterfield's second puntink chance rolled dead on the Steeler 18.

In the fourth period, center Frank Sinkovitz intercepted a Waterfield pass on the Pittsburgh 30 and was running in the clear when he lost his footing and fell in the goeey mud on the Ram 19.

Halfback Joe Geri ran 18 yards for the Steeler score, shouldering aside two Rams and dragging a third across the goal with him. Joe Glamp kicked the extra point.

37,303 Wrigley Field fans yelling.

Tripucka tossed a 4-yard touchdown pass to Bill Dudley in the first period, then two more in a last quarter rally, both 35 yards to rookie Cloyce Box.

Lujack fired two touchdown flips. In the second period he hit Jim Keane for 16 yards and connected on a 59-yard passing play to Ken Kavanaugh in the third.

Tripucka speared his target 15 times in 32 tosses for 222 yards. Lujack completed 11 out of 23 for 172.

The first time they got the ball they marched 79 yards. George McAfee capped the drive with a 12-yard scoring spurt around end.

The Lions tied it 7-7 on a 67-yard drive featuring Tripucka's three completions on three tries and his 4-yard payoff to Dudley.

In the second quarter, Ray Bray's recovery of Don Doll's fumble on the Lions' 18 set up Lujack's touchdown toss to Keane. Soon after, Dudley booted a 16-yard field goal.

The Bears ballooned their lead, 20-10, midway in the third period on Lujack's 40-yard pass to Kavanaugh, the end snaring it on the 19 and racing across.

At the outset of the finale, Ed Cody filched Tripucka's pass and ran it back 38 yards for the fourth Bear score.

Mrs. Morgan Sets Three Rifle Marks

Vineland, N. J., Nov. 13.—Mrs. Ruth Morgan, Takoma Park, Md., broke three women's national rifle records in the Fraternal Order of Eagles Rifle Club tournament here this weekend.

Mrs. Morgan shot 374x400 in the 20 shots prone and 20 shots standing telescopic sights class, eclipsing the old record of 371.

In the 20 shots kneeling, telescopic sights class, Mrs. Morgan had 187x200 to surpass the old record of 183x200 and in the 20 shots standing metalic sights she had 177x200 beating the old record of 174x200.

Trinidad Wins

Trinidad defeated Allentown, 33-19, yesterday at Allentown.

Benched Tucker at His Peak

Tatum's Hunch on Lavine Paid Off

Stan Took Terps To Decisive Score

SMILING JIM TATUM, as distinguished from the dour Tatum who was weighted down with misgivings all last week, admitted yesterday that he played his hunches right in Maryland's 14-13 victory that dislodged Boston U. from the ranks of the unbeaten.

Tatum came up with what was virtually a two-platoon system of quarterbacks, benching Joe Tucker after that young man took Maryland 77 yards to its first touchdown. Suddenly in the second half, he switched to Stan Lavine, and was rewarded with a winning touchdown drive of 81 yards.

"Tucker wasn't doing anything wrong," said Tatum. "He was pretty magnificent the way he was calling 'em and handing off in the first half, and the first pass he threw set up our first touchdown.

"I don't know why I switched to Lavine. It was just a hunch, and I never had a better one. Lavine didn't do anything wrong, either. He was pretty brazen on some of his stuff, but he got away with it. In our biggest game of the year we got our best job from our quarterbacks."

Tatum declared that on the point of deception, BU was the best club Maryland had faced all season, including Michigan State. "If they had a power runner, nobody would beat 'em," he added.

Harry Agganis, BU's tricky quarterback, lost no stature with Tatum despite the fact that for the first time this season Agganis failed to complete at least one touchdown pass.

"I didn't dream Agganis was that fine a ball player. I never saw a sophomore quarterback who had all his stuff. I don't know who is going to beat BU next season. I suspect nobody will."

No visiting celebrity ever justified his notices, incidentally, more than did Ray Krouse, Maryland's All-America tackle candidate. Krouse was all over the premises, and Maryland found a new star in his runningmate at the other tackle, Chester Gierula, who emerged from the shadow of the more illustrious Krouse to attain stature of his own.

In fact, Maryland uncovered a slew of new talent. Earl Roth, hitherto confined to specialist punting roles, rivaled big Ed Modzelewski for ball-carrying honors in the final quarter when his lengthy plunges enabled Maryland to control the ball after the winning touchdown. And Modzelewski showed definite signs of emerging as a break-away back next season, with more experience at keeping his feet when in the clear.

Both Quarterbacks Reach Best Form

Maryland, now definitely bowl-minded, apparently can have the $45,000 Alligator Bowl invitation for the asking if it gets past the Thanksgiving Day game with West Virginia, and the December 2 date with Miami University in Florida. The team that beat B. U. doesn't figure to be stopped from here in.

Yanks Top Hornets, 14-10

Winners Clinch Playoff Berth

By Harold Claassen

New York, Nov. 13 (AP).—A wasteful New York football team defeated Chicago's Hornets today, 14 to 10, for the victory that assured the Yankees a berth in the All-America Conference playoffs.

The Yankee triumph, coupled with Cleveland's tie with Buffalo, puts first place at stake in the game here next Sunday with the Browns. Today's game was played before only 9091 fans.

New York got both its touchdowns in the first eight minutes. Buddy Young grabbed the opening kickoff and scampered 91 yards for the first marker.

Minutes later the New Yorkers started a drive from the Chicago 39. On the first play Chris Iverson went 14 and then Sherman Howard wasted three times and the second touchdown was recorded. Harvey Johnson converted both, to run his string of successful conversions to 98 in a row.

Chicago got all its tallies in the second canto. Howard fumbled on the Hornet 16 as the period opened and the Chicagoans began an aerial attack that culminated in Jim McCarthy's field goal from the 25.

After the Yankees had worked the ball to their own 45 following the kickoff, Tom Landry fumbled and Bob Jensen recovered to start the visitors off on a drive which saw Ray Ramsey score from 28 yards out on a pass from John Clement.

At Bethesda

Ben Whiting, La Salle Win 4-Ball Title

Ben Whiting fired a hot 34 on the front nine of the morning round in the 36-hole championship match for the Bethesda Country Club four ball title yesterday to give himself and Joe LaSalle a five up lead at the turn.

After opening up that lead they went on to rout Tom Manning and Tom Baldwin, 8 and 7, to take the title.

PRINCE GEORGES—Norman Brown won the Prince Georges Bank trophy with a 77—6—71. Charlie Huston took runner-up honors with 87—15—72. Low gross was won by Jim Kinder, 76.

George Voigt shot a 76 for low gross in the men's Turkey tournament. Bob Bowie, 77—7—70 and Amos Dodd, 79—9—70 tied for low net.

Mrs. Bessie Eaton won the ladies Turkey tournament by eleven strokes with 94—26—68. Mrs. Lois Chamison, 94—15—79 was second and Ann Tipton, 99—19—80, third.

KENWOOD—A mixed Scotch foursome turkey tournament was won by Mrs. J. H. Vance and Tom Langhenry, 86—18—68. Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Bullock, 90—7—73, were second. Isabell Kelley and J. H. Somes, 87—13—74, took third. Low gross went to Mrs. Ed Fox and Don Jones, 85.

INDIAN SPRING—Eight turkeys were distributed at the blind bogey tournament, with the last three being won on a draw.

The winners: Maj. Ed Griesemer, 83—15—68 Ed Abramson, 96—28—68; Frank Butler, 80—12—68; Dan Arnold, 88—8—80; W. A. Olsen, 99—19—80; Charles Andregg, 86—10—75; Henry Cohen, 100—25—75, and A. O. Dooley, 84—9—75.

CONGRESSIONAL—Dr. B. F. "Chicken" Dean won his second turkey tournament in as many days with a 96-16—80 in a blind bogey event. Other winners were John Conroy, 85-13—72, and John Spearman, 96-16—80.

WASHINGTON—Mr. and Mrs. J. Kester took low net in a mixed Scotch foursome turkey tournament with 98-31—67. Low gross went to Mrs. M. H. Dinneen and R. W. Westwood with 80. Second net was won by Miss E. Crump and H. Lawson, 91-22—69; third net went to Mrs. R. L. Hutchinson and Elmer Jenkins, 86-16—70.

Terps Defend Harrier Title

Nine Southern Conference teams will try to oust Maryland as the champion in the annual cross-country meet today at College Park.

The Old Liners have won the conference championship the past two years. Today's opposition will come from North Carolina, North Carolina State, Duke, Davidson, VMI, VPI, William and Mary, Richmond and Washington and Lee.

Leading Maryland in defense of its title will be Bob Palmer, unbeaten in three years of Southern Conference competition. Palmer holds the record time of 19 minutes 40 seconds for the 4 miles, distance of today's race.

Palmer set a course record in the four meets in which he has participated this season. Coach Jim Kehoe's team won five dual meets this campaign, running its unbeaten record to 19.

In addition to Palmer, Tyson Creamer, Lindy Kehoe, Jim Umbarger, Howard Umberger, Jim Harris, Bob Browning and Joe Grimaldi will run for Maryland.

Dozen Probable Starters

$15,000 Riggs 'Cap Thursday To Close Out Pimlico Meet

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 13.—The Riggs Handicap, long one of the more important races offered by the Maryland Jockey Club each fall, is the lone remaining stake to be decided before the curtain is rung down on the 21-day meeting next Thursday. That is the date of the running of the Riggs, for a prize of $15,000 added and over a distance of a mile and a half.

The roster of Riggs winners, starting with 1926 when Crusader was the victor, is an impressive one, since it includes such immortal turf stars as Bostonian, Roman Soldier, Sea Biscuit, Riverland, Sun Again, Stymie and Polynesian, just to mention a few.

This year's renewal of the stake promises to be one of the most exciting in the long series for the field of a dozen probable starters includes at least eight horses which have triumphed in other stakes this season. Since all are familiar with the long route of the Riggs, the contest shapes up as a wide-open affair in which at least half of the participants will be accorded good chances by the public.

Those expected to run are: Brookmeade Stable's Blue Hills and Going Away, Frank Frankel's Flashco, Mrs. Deering Howe's Donor, S. W. Labrot's Taran, Edward Lasker's Natural, Mrs. Ruth Manzano-Small's Chiloe 2d, Julio Menditeguy's Night Bird, S. M. Newmeyer's Turbine, A. J. Sackett's Gasparilla, F. A. Bonsal's Pilaster, C. E. Tuttle's Double Brandy and E. E. Voynow's Stud Poker.

Blue Hills, Double Brandy and Gasparilla all have won stakes in Maryland this fall while Going Away, Donor, Stud Poker and Pilaster all have been successful in feature events at other tracks.

Dear Folks:

The Monday program opens the final four days of racing here. Friday is an off day, giving the regular fans a chance to catch up on their shopping before Bowie opens on Saturday. Pimlico went up sharply last week, thanks to the spell of Indian Summer weather, and now the meeting will compare favorably with last year. Jockeys Johnny Gilbert and Bobbie Strange return to action here after going to New York for stake engagements. The best steeplechase bet hereabouts isn't a horse but Jockey Danny Marzani. He rode five winners over the local brush. See you on the rail. BILL.

Police Find Ill, Missing Man in Jail

A 64-year-old diabetic was arrested on a "drunk" charge and kept in jail 14 hours yesterday without police realizing that he had earlier been reported on police teletype as missing and ill.

He is Walter Harrison Johnson, of 723 Irving st. nw. His family said he wandered away from his home about 3 p. m. Saturday.

At 3:15 a. m., yesterday, Pvt. C. C. Clinesmith of the Fifth Precinct, traveling with a partner in a scout car, arrested Johnson at 1st and O sts. se., and charged him with being drunk.

When first arrested, police said, Johnson gave an address which turned out to be wrong. His identity was finally established, police reported from a telephone caller at 4:50 p. m. yesterday who identified himself merely as "Smith."

He was released to his family at 5:15 p. m., yesterday after they had been notified by telephone that he was at the Fifth Precinct station on a drunk charge.

Police Decline Collateral

Family members said they were told to bring $10 collateral for him, but later at the station, the collateral was declined and they were given custody of the man, just as police had prepared to send him to a hospital.

Lieut. William P. Barnes, in command of the station last night, said that Capt. Thomas E. Edwards, the precinct commander, had ordered a complete investigation of the case and a written report.

Police teletype records show that at 8:03 p. m., Saturday, a general lookout was sent to all precincts and divisions naming and describing Johnson. It originated at the Tenth Precinct and said that Johnson "is suffering from diabetes and hardening of the arteries."

Doesn't Remember

Private Clinesmith said last night that he did not remember whether or not he heard the lookout read at the midnight lineup, Saturday night, when he went to work.

Clinesmith said, however, "he definitely had alcohol on his breath, and he was incoherent. We had a very busy Saturday night with cuttings and fights. We took him in more to get him off the streets and save him from possible injury than anything else."

Lieutenant Barnes said last night it is the responsibility of arresting officers to check prisoners against lookout and other orders.

Sergt. William E. Rogers, who was acting lieutenant in command of the precinct on the midnight shift Saturday night, said he had no knowledge of the case, but would investigate. He said it was responsibility of officers in the station to check prisoners against lookouts and other orders.

Dr. George W. Adams, 627 Kenyon st. nw., was called to examine Johnson upon his return home. Dr. Adams said that the patient was not in danger but "easily might have been" while he was held.

Quarantine Of Dogs Urged In Suburbs

Quarantine of dogs in the general eastern suburban area of Montgomery County and the Chillum-Hyattsville area of Prince Georges County, Md., will be asked Tuesday.

At least nine children have been bitten and three more exposed to rabid dogs in the area, and it is believed that several animals other than those which have been disposed of may have contracted rabies.

Dr. A. L. Brueckner, head of the Maryland Livestock Sanitary Service, and Dr. V. L. Ellicott, Montgomery County health officer, will appear before the Montgomery County Council Tuesday to ask that the quarantine be ordered.

The Prnce Georges County Commissioners also will be urged to issue a quarantine order and provide for vaccinations in that county.

Quarantine will require that all dogs be kept tied or confined at home or be on leash in the street. The usual procedure is to permit dogs that have been vaccinated and wear the metal tag certifying vaccination against rabies to recover their liberty after about three weeks.

An outbreak of rabies in 1943 was halted by wholesale vaccination of dogs.

A dog from Chillum in Prince Georges County which bit a black cocker spaniel at Four Corners also bit three children in the Indian Spring Village section October 13, Dr. Ellicott said. The dog then returned to its home, to be taken to a veterinary hospital to die.

Police Seize 3 Youths in NW Stickup

Police early yesterday seized three youths a little more than two hours after a Government Printing Office employe was robbed of $19 in the 1700 block of Irving st. nw.

The victim, Emil Jakubek, 37, an apprentice compositor, of 221 Rhode Island ave. ne., told police he was approached by three youths at about 2:30 a. m. on the street.

His accosters, he said, held their hands menacingly in their pockets and demanded his money.

He gave them all he had—$20—and then pleaded for carfare. The thugs gave him back $1 then fled in a blue sedan.

Jakubek shouted for help as the car sped off and an alarm was called into police headquarters.

Lieut. Otto Fuss, assistant head of the robbery squad; Detective Sergts. Paul Clarke and Edward Crandall and Precinct Detective Andrew Gerber went to the scene.

After learning from Jakubek that the first two symbols of the cars license were K-6, the detectives made a tour of all-night restaurants on the theory that the thugs would want a snack after their labors.

At about 4:30 a. m. they spotted a car answering the description of the getaway sedan parked on a lot adjoining a restaurant near Connecticut ave. and N sts. nw.

The detectives waited. Half an hour later three youths approached the vehicle and were seized.

Charged with robbery after they were identified by Jakubek, the three were booked as: William J. Henderson, 21, and Charles Lee Hoal, 19, both of 911 10th st. se., 5th st. ne.

Police Seek Motive for Slaying At Ohio Fraternity House

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 13 (AP).—Columbus detectives still sought today a possible motive for an Ohio State University freshman's desire to arm himself a few minutes before he shot and killed a fraternity brother.

Police were particularly interested in what took place in the five-to-ten-minute interval Saturday morning during which James D. Heer, 20, of Euclid, Ohio, was with his "date" in her room after a homecoming dance.

Shortly after that, Heer returned to the Delta Tau Delta Fraternity house where he lived, grabbed a .45-caliber automatic belonging to a fraternity brother, and ran out of the house.

Minutes later, police said young Heer admitted, he shot and killed Jack T. McKeown, 21, or Norwood, Ohio, an OSU senior and a fraternity brother.

Police said Miss Joyce Crafton, 22, of Cleveland, who did not witness the actual shooting, was held as a material witness "because she witnessed its probable cause." She is not a student at OSU.

Asked if police have determined the probable cause, Detective Sergt. L. V. Sheets said:

"I think we have. The whole case hinges on what happened in the 5 or 10 minutes Heer spent with the girl in her room after taking her home from the dance."

Miss Crafton was staying overnight with Heer's aunt and uncle.

Sergeant Sheets said several witnesses told him Heer had quarreled with Miss Crafton during the evening and that "he had given her a hard way to go."

The fatal shot was fired at 2:45 a. m. Saturday after a night of homecoming festivities.

32 Seized in Racial Disorders

Chicago, Nov. 13 (AP).—Thirty-two persons were arrested last night and early today after two assaults occurred in a South Side neighborhood where disorders have been reported during the past five nights.

Two men were beaten. Most of those arrested were charged with disorderly conduct.

Since the outbreak of sporadic street demonstrations in the neighborhood of the 5600 block of South Peoria st. last Tuesday night, a total of 58 persons have been seized. Many of them were juveniles.

Police said the tension was stirred up by false rumors, which continue to persist, that Negro families are to be moved into the area.

Five Negroes were among those held after the incidents last night.

One of the incidents last night culminated in the beating of Edward Harris, 24, Chicago, a Negro student at the University of Chicago. He told police he was attacked by a man after the student had asked the other whether he was a Communist.

Police said Harris had a knife with a 6-inch blade in his pocket.

Violent Death Inquests Here Planned Today

Two inquests into violent deaths are slated for District Morgue today beginning at 11:30 a. m.

One case involves the death of Mrs. Myrtle Scott, 30, of 1241 6½ st. nw., who died in Freedmen's Hospital Saturday.

Mrs. Scott was reported to have suffered head injuries when she was hit with a bronze lamp during a fight over a dollar with her husband, Elbert Scott, 36, on November 1.

Scott was first charged with assault with a dangerous weapon and his case continued in Municipal Court until November 22.

The other case concerns the death of Thurman Wright, 38, of 149 H st. se., who died in Gallinger Hospital Saturday from stab wounds suffered in a fight Friday, police said. Police charged William Robinson, 59, of the same address, with assault with a dangerous weapon.

Police Baffled By Beating of Girl, 15, Here

Police were mystified yesterday in attempts to solve an apparent assault on a 15-year-old girl at 9:20 p. m., Saturday.

The victim was Kathleen Marie Staley, of 14 Compass Green sw. She was in Providence Hospital suffering a brain concussion, possible skull fracture, and cuts and bruises about the mouth.

Because of her condition, police were unable to obtain any clear story from her.

Officers said she told them she was walking to her home from a nearby store when she heard footsteps behind her. She walked faster, and the footsteps increased in speed, they said, and then she blacked out, remembering nothing further.

A friend of hers, Joan McKenzie, 12 Rudder Green sw., and Corp. D. J. Capinas, a marine from Quantico, told police they were at a bus stop about 200 yards away, but out of sight, when they heard a scream. They hurried toward the sound, and saw Kathleen coming toward them, bleeding from cuts about the mouth. They took her to her mother, Mrs. William L. Matthewus, who in turn took her to Providence Hospital.

Police and physicians informed them there was no evidence of sexual molestation. The officers could find no one who had seen another person in the vicinity where the girl was injured.

Civil Service Taking Steps for Classifying 25,000 More Jobs

Civil Service today will take a first step toward bringing up to 25,000 additional Federal jobs under the new Classification Act. These jobs were all exempted from the old law.

Among the entire agencies to be covered by the new law are the Export-Import Bank, Federal Prison Industries, Reconstruction Finance, Federal Housing, United States Soldiers' Home and the Displaced Persons Commission. Certain Federal Power Commission experts, Customs clerks, Immigration inspectors, and Agriculture employes also are to have their salaries fixed by the new act.

Civil Service will fix the date—not later than May 1, 1950—for these jobs to be converted to the classified pay scale. Meanwhile, heads of these agencies have the authority to fix salary rates for their employes and several of them already have granted pay boosts in line with the new law.

This is important—employes in these jobs won't be given salary cuts even though Civil Service classifies some of the jobs below existing salary rates. When the new appointees go into the jobs, however, the lower classified rate would prevail. The law forbids salary reductions in the job conversion process.

The score of agencies involved have been given until December 1 to supply the commission with the number of jobs to be classified; their distribution by grades and annual salary rates, and current organization charts. In addition, the agencies are to prepare job descriptions and a recommendation for grades and salaries for them under the new act.

With these data, the commission will decide whether to make checks on the jobs and agency recommendations for them before or after they are brought in under the classified system. Where the commission has serious doubts, pre-audits will be made of the jobs. The commission has full authority to make final decisions on jobs to be covered and exempted by the act. Any questions should be directed to its Classification Division.

Creekmore Fath, former Interior and Democratic National Committee official, is in the running for the Federal Trade Commission vacancy.

E. M. Fisher of Columbia University, has been offered the $15,000 job as director of research for the Housing and Home Finance Agency. He'll probably reject it. Fisher formerly headed the research staff at Federal Housing.

David Stowe, an administrative assistant to the President, has been given temporary charge of operating the National Security Resources Board. He's a former Budget Bureau official.

Harold I. Baynton has support to be appointed Assistant Attorney General in charge of Alien Property. He's an official in the agency. Leo Looney is back by Massachusetts Democrats for the post.

CENSUS: The two-year-old fight over where to locate the bulk of its temporary jobs is slated to be settled this week.

It's sure that a big bloc of them will be set up in Philadelphia. But how many—that's the problem. Census had planned to locate 5500 of them in that city but under the restrictions laid down by Congress it has been unable to locate adequate office space there for that number of jobs.

A recommendation has been made for the transfer of about 3500 jobs to Philadelphia and to set up about 6000 others in this city.

JOB NEWS: Civil Service will announce an examination soon for six different types of office machine operators at starting salaries from $2200 to $2600. The machines are addressing, graphotype, bookkeeping, calculating, card punch and tabulating . . . Also coming up are tests for veterinarian trainees, $2775 to $3100, and plate printer, $24 daily . . . Civil Service will accept applications for its librarian test, $3100 to start, until December 7.

Patent examiner and messenger tests will be given Tuesday for those who applied for them . . . A register of 383 eligibles has been set up from the recent dental officer exam . . . A total of 1119 persons passed the recent exam for photographer, microphotographer, blueprint and photostat operator

Commercial Pressmen Act to Form Own Local

'Good Majority' Reported Favoring Proposal to Split From Group Here

The move, which would split off about 255 commercial pressmen from Local No. 1, was discussed at a private meeting of about 40 pressmen yesterday and favored by a "good majority," according to one of those present.

The "secession" would reduce Local No. 1 to a Government employes' local, with a membership of about 500 Government Printing Office employes, about 125 Bureau of Engraving employes and a smaller number of pressmen from other Government agencies.

Committee of Four Named

While there has been some sentiment for the move for a number of years, no formal plans have been made until yesterday, when Louis A. Lopez, Local No. 1 president, and Henry G. Klamp, recording secretary, were invited to the meeting. Lopez opposed the proposed action.

However, the group yesterday appointed a committee of four to circulate petitions among all the commercial pressmen members, asking the international union for a separate charter.

No attempt is being made to "railroad" the commercial pressmen's decision on the question, a spokesman for the group said, and if enough signatures aren't secured, the matter will be dropped. One of the committee members circulating the petitions is against the move.

A spokesman for the "secessionists" said the major reason for the move was the "lack of proper representation" of commercial pressmen in the local.

Present officers of the local all are GPO or Bureau of Engraving employes, except for one member of the executive board. The local's constitution requires that one board member should be elected from the commercial shop employes.

Another reason given by commercial pressmen in favor of seeking a separate charter is the international union's threat to lift th charter of the present Local No. 1. This was based on charges that the local group violated the union's constitution in battling for a union share in the estate of George Berry, late international president.

The Washington local has been the spearhead of a Pressmen's Union group that contends most of the Berry estate belongs to the union because it was built up with union funds.

Local No. 1, which was established in 1889, is the oldest unit of the international union. The last secession from it was in 1917, when the newspaper pressmen left Local No. 1 and set up Web Pressmen's Local No. 6.

Austrian-Owned Art Goes on Display Sunday

The Washington Post

Austrian Gold Treasures at Art Gallery

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

Exciting as the sight that greeted Ali Baba when he entered the cave is a vault at the National Gallery of Art containing work in gold, silver, rock crystal and precious stones.

They are part of the objets d'art, paintings, tapestries, sculptures, classical antiquities and armor loaned by the Austrian Government for exhibit in the United States, with the American premiere opening at 5 p. m. next Sunday at the National Gallery.

Dr. Erich V. Strohmer, a man with a cherubic pink face like a Santa Claus, as the Viennese curator of sculpture and objets d'art in the collection, is the man with the "open sesame" to this vault.

Treasures Displayed

In English that has vastly improved since he and Dr. Ernst H. Buschbeck, curator of paintings, arrived at the United States Naval Gun Factory aboard a Naval vessel bringing the fabulous collection from Europe, he pointed out some of the treasures once owned by royal and imperial Hapsburgs.

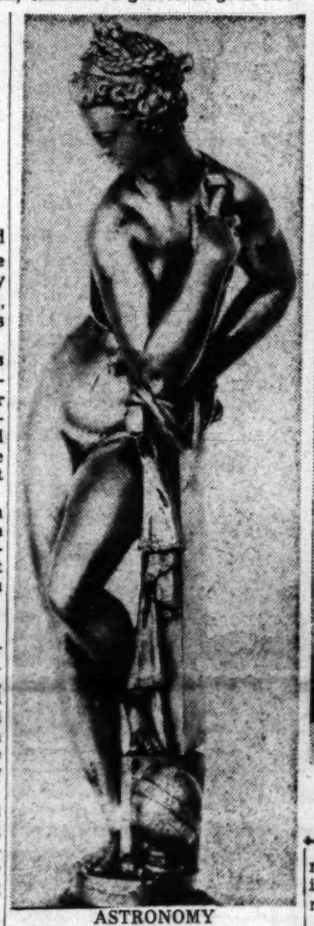
"Look at this hammered and cast gold salt cellar," he said, pointing to what will be a star exhibit in the show. "It is the only work of its kind verified as being by Cellini!

"It is 9 pounds of pure gold," he added as an afterthought.

"When Goethe translated Cellini's 'Autobiography' he added a footnote saying that the salt cellar was no longer in existence. After the book appeared, the salt cellar was found at Ambras, ancient castle home of Archduke Ferdinand, regent of the Tyrol."

Ingenious Casters

Turning the 10 by 13 inch object over, he showed how balls in socket joints in the base permit it to be pushed effortlessly across the table.



ASTRONOMY
. . . Artist, Giovanni Bologna

An adjacent object, called the "Michael Goblet" for convenience, caught his eye and he held it up for greater admiration.

Gold, 20 inches tall, it gets its name from a figure of the Archangel Michael, sword upraised, defeating Satan. On the sides in hammered relief are scenes alluding to the pleasures of wine. It is the work of an unknown French master between 1530 and 1540, and is studded with black diamonds, rubies, and pearls.

It was given to Archduke Ferdinand, along with the Cellini salt cellar, by Charles IX of France in 1570.

Gilded Copper Bust

"It is a reliquary," explained Dr. Strohmer, lifting the mitre off to show an empty receptacle within. "It came from the diocese of Brixen in the Tyrol, and was made around the beginning of the fifteenth century." The figure represents St. Cassian."

ENGRAVED and gilded copper reliquary depicting St. Cassian, from the Diocese of Brixen in the Tyrol and made around the beginning of the fourteenth century

On the same table with St. Cassian is the Wilten chalice with paten of silver engraved and filled with gold. Once the property of Abbott Henrich von Wilten, it was made about 1160.

The main design on the flat top of the paten shows the Marys at the Sepulchre, the underside depicts the crucifixion. On the base of the chalice are Old Testament scenes, on the bowl scenes from the New Testament.

"Look," said Dr. Strohmer, holding up two small metal straws. "Through these they tasted the wine."

Auto Accidents Fatal to Three In District Area

Washington Man Dies in Early A. M. Collision Here; Two Killed in Maryland

A man tentatively identified as Wallace Jones, 30, of the Dunbar Hotel, was killed and four persons were severely injured early this morning in a collision of a trailer-truck and an automobile at 11th st. and Maryland av. sw, bringing the total traffic fatalities for 24 hours in the Washington area to three.

In two earlier nearby Maryland accidents, the victims were Clifton Edwin Arendes, 27, a warehouseman, 1417 Massachusetts av. se., and Mrs. Nellie Teresa Lloyd, 51, of 9812 Brunett av, Silver Spring, Md.

Arendes died of a broken neck when the sedan in which he was riding with two companions failed to make a sharp curve near Avenue, Md., at 12:20 a.m. Mrs. Lloyd was pronounced dead from a fractured skull on arrival at the Washington Sanitarium, Takoma Park, following a two-car crash in the rain at Colesville rd. and Sligo Creek pkwy., at 7 p.m.

Girl, 19, Is Other Driver

Mrs. Lloyd was driving with her husband, John F. Lloyd, jr., a mechanic, when his car collided with one driven by Miss Helen K. Corbett, 19. Miss Corbett is a daughter of John Corbett, national legislative representative of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, who lives at 1760 Park rd. nw.

Force of the impact swung open the right front door of the Lloyd car, catapulting Mrs. Lloyd to the highway. The vehicle spun around and careened against a telephone pole.

Technical Charge Lodged

A technical charge of manslaughter was lodged against both drivers. A hearing date was not set.

The Avenue, Md., accident brought to a tragic end a merry weekend party.

Injured in the crash were James F. Duckett, Seat Pleasant, who sustained a possible fracture of the skull and possible internal injuries besides a fractured elbow; and James G. Vermillion, 23, of 1509 West Virginia ave. ne., who suffered cuts and bruises.

Both men were taken to St. Mary's Hospital, Leonardtown, Md. Duckett's condition was listed as critical while Vermillion's was reported good.

Arendes was pronounced dead at the scene by Dr. Julian S. Lane, St. Marys County medical examiner.

Arendes' wife, Dorothy, mother of two small children, narrowly escaped being an occupant of the death car.

She and her husband, together with friends, had been attending a dance at Avenue. The party, on leaving the dance, decided to drive back to a summer cottage belonging to Mrs. Arendes' parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Zellers, near Avenue.

Arendes went in a car operated by Vermillion, but Mrs. Arendes decided to drive in another car with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. William L. Gee, 4513 Overlook ave. sw.

Car Breaks Through Fence

The Gee car arrived at the cottage first.

Meanwhile the Vermillion car had shot off the roadway on Route 242 as it failed to make a sharp turn.

It careened against a pole, smashed into a tree and broke through a fence before it overturned.

Arendes once attended Central High School here for a short time. He also attended Sherwood High School in Montgomery County,

No Wax on Floor

Ballerina's Fall Blamed On Wet Spot

Patrick Hayes, Washington concert manager, yesterday said the Constitution Hall stage had not been waxed or varnished before a ballerina's fall there last week.

Taking exception to previous reports, he said lumpy rosin and other factors were involved in the accidental fall of Margot Fonteyn and the near fall of Moira Shearer of the Sadler's Wells Ballet company.

"There never has been any wax, shellac or varnish placed on the Constitution Hall platform," said Hayes, in a talk over station WQQW stressing the need for a Washington opera house and theater.

"After every performance of any kind, including symphony concerts and rehearsals, the surface of the stage is thoroughly cleansed and scrubbed with a strong soap solution.

Called Standard Practice

"And this was particularly done before the first performance last Monday night of the Sadler's Wells Ballet.

"The substance that clung to the toe-dancing slippers of the dancers was rosin. It is standard practice for dancing companies to have a box of powdered rosin near the entrance for the dancers to dip their toes just before entering. If the rosin clung to the dancers' feet in chunks there must have been something the matter with it," he said.

Hayes said a moist spot due to a male dancer's perspiration in a previous ballet Monday evening was the actual cause of the near-fall and fall.

Hayes said the stage had been examined by the companys advance man before the troupe came to Washington. He found nothing wrong with it, he said.

Hayes said he had inquired into the incident, talking to the manager of the hall and stagehands, because "Constitution Hall has become a favorite whipping boy around here. It is a concert hall, not a theater. Can we take advantage of the incident to stress the need for a theater?" he asked.

Newest Member of Supreme Bench

'Shay' Minton, Once Its Critic, Likely to Play Big Court Role

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

On the afternoon of July 13, 1937, Senator Joseph T. Robinson, the majority leader, was sitting on the Senate portico resting from his enervating battle for Franklin D. Roosevelt's already doomed plan to "pack" the Supreme Court.

He sent a page boy to fetch the Democratic whip, Senator "Shay" Minton of Indiana. Minton was shocked when he saw the usually pink-cheeked massive Arkansan.

"Joe was ashen," he recalled last week. "I asked him if he wanted me to call a doctor. But he said, no, hell no; it was only his indigestion and he was going home to rest a bit.

"He told me to tell Senator Barkley to take over while he was away. I guess I was about the last person to see Joe alive."

"A Strong Partisan"

Robinson was found dead next morning in his Methodist Building apartment across the Capitol Plaza. The court fight was over; it apparently had killed Joe Robinson.

This morning Justice Sherman (Shay) Minton will walk from his apartment in the same Methodist Building to his suite in the Supreme Court building across Maryland ave ne., a few steps.

In the days he was helping Robinson in the court fight, Minton was, in his own words, six weeks ago, "a strong partisan."

Minton considers his views on the court plan a matter of record and his letter this fall to the Senate Judiciary Committee, which approved his nomination, an end to that. It was in that letter that he said he had been—but was no longer—a partisan. It implied, that, on reflection, he considered the court plan a bad idea, despite a desirable objective of bringing the court up to date.

For Minton has been consistent in his feelings about the great breadth of the Constitution. Last week he explained one of his famous senatorial remarks: "You can't eat the Constitution."

"You have to remember the context when I said that. Those were the days people were saying relief had to be left to the Red Cross, to township trustees and poorhouses, that it was unconstitutional for the Federal Government to help.

"I wasn't speaking lightly of the Constitution—I believe highly in it—but I didn't believe the Federal Government was hamstrung. I was highly flattered when Senator (William E.) Borah, the constitutional expert, later used the phrase."

Minton recounted that in the Senate he once debated the late "Lion of Idaho" on the constitutionality of an antilynching bill.

"I argued," said Minton, "that when the States fell down, the Federal Government, under the Fourteenth Amendment, had to step in and that there was no conflict of sovereignty."

Those Senate days, when Shay Minton and Harry S. Truman had adjoining back row seats (Truman was to the left of Minton), were "among the happiest days of my life."

During his eight years on the United States Court of Appeals in Chicago (1941-49), Minton always found time, while visiting a married daughter here, to drop in on the Senate floor, a former Senator's privilege President Truman also finds pleasing.

Didn't Expect "Backfire"

"They were a tremendously interesting group in the Senate," he said, "and I was very happy at the privilege of service with a fine group of men."

Next to his part in the court "packing" plan, Minton's most famous exploit was the introduction of a bill making it a felony "to publish as a fact anything known to be false."

The bill, carrying fines and imprisonment for erring publishers, brought down the house on Minton's head. Looking back last week, he recalled:

"The American Newspaper Publishers Association had just had a convention and issued a report calling for the prohibition of the 'misuse' of radio for political purposes. It was an attack on Roosevelt for his 'fireside chats.'

"I wanted to get after them for that and I knew a speech wouldn't be enough. I knew I'd have to goad them, knife them a bit, so I just dashed off that little bill. I didn't think it was going to backfire on me the way it did."

Part of his row with the press can be traced to the rabid isolationism of the Chicago Tribune, which seeps into Minton's own Indiana. For Minton's consistent internationalism goes back to Woodrow Wilson.

"I was a great League of Nations guy," he said last week. "As a matter of fact, I'm just about the original Wilson man.

"When I was in high school in 1908 (he was 18, now is 59) we used Wilson's books on government. I had a teacher who was a staunch Republican and the day after Bryan was defeated for the third time he asked me: 'Well, who are you Democrats going to turn to now?' And I replied 'Woodrow Wilson.' He just laughed at me and said Wilson was 'only a college professor.'"

Minton supported Roosevelt's foreign policy and had many salty words to say about the Tribune, a paper he called "that unspeakable Tribune, the Chicago Tribune that even the newspapers themselves condemn."

On the bench, however, Minton has had a few opportunities to express his social and economic philosophy. He wrote the unanimous opinion upholding the Government's District Court victory in the A. & P. anti-trust case (the grocery firm did not appeal that criminal case to the Supreme Court. It now faces a civil suit on similar grounds, a suit which in time is likely to reach the high bench).

Minton voted to uphold a ruling that pensions may be part of collective bargaining, a ruling that set off union drives in steel and other industries.

Once, in 1948, Judge Minton was named to head a board to investigate a coal dispute. John L. Lewis refused to have anything to do with it and wrote Minton a famous letter about his "disinclination to accept."

Now on the highest bench in the land, Sherman Minton will have plenty of opportunity to indicate his convictions on the issues before the court. He has been tagged as likely to vote with the liberal bloc, but that appears to be a rather reckless guess this early in the game.

With a court so closely divided on many issues Minton is likely to find himself on more than one occasion casting a deciding vote.

Back in the court "packing" days, Minton was fightnig alongside Franklin D. Roosevelt against a "horse and buggy" attitude by the Nine Old Men.

The court's thinking has, of course, long since caught up with the times. Now the battles in which Minton himself will take part are those within the still vast area of man's rights and government's responsibilities in this atomic age and the welfare state.

A. D. Phillips Rites Will Be Held Today

Funeral services for Adon Daniel Phillips, 71, retired member of the Dependents Pension Board of the Veterans Administration who died Thursday in Homeopathic Hospital after a short illness, will be held today at 11 a. m. at the Robert A. Pumphrey Funeral Home, 7557 Wisconsin ave., Bethesda. Burial will follow in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mr. Phillips had worked with the Government for 47 years until his retirement last year. He started in the Bureau of Pensions in 1901, later serving as chief of section. He also for several years was legal consultant to the director. Dependents and Beneficiaries Claim Service. His last position was with the pension board.

A native of Otcelic, Chenango County, N. Y., Mr. Phillips was a graduate of George Washington University (then, Columbia College), receiving his AB degree in 1906. He was admitted to the D. C. Bar in 1908.

Mr. Phillips was married to Olive B. Wilson in 1906 in Norwich, N. Y.

For many years, Mr. Phillips was a member of Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw., and later a member of the Chevy Chase Baptist Church.

Mr. Phillips lived for the past 30 years in a house he designed and constructed on Greentree rd., Bradley Hills, Md.

Surviving, besides his wife, are two children, Mrs. Mary Alice Hague, 18 Woodhaven blvd., Bethesda, and Adon W. Phillips of Baltimore; a sister, Miss Mae E. Phillips, Beaver Meadow, N. Y.; a brother, Ivon W. Phillips of Wilmington, Del., and five grandchildren.

A Washington woman was among 12 persons injured early yesterday when a Richmond-bound Greyhound bus overturned on Route 1, near Carmel Church about 20 miles south of Fredericksburg, Va.

Miss Pearl Bailey, 45, of 3910 Kansas ave. nw., was admitted to Mary Washington Hospital, Fredericksburg, for observation but authorities said she would be released today.

The others were treated for minor injuries.

State police said the bus was headed south and ran into the opposite lane of the highway before it turned over. The accident occurred at 5:30 a. m.

At Altavista, Va., a 5-year-old Campbell County boy was dragged and whirled to his death at 4:30 p. m. yesterday when his pants leg became entangled with the drive shaft in a truck and he was spun to the roadway.

The victim was James Robert Mitchell, Route 1, Altavista. Police said the truck was driven by George Mitchell, the boy's father.

The boy was reported to be one of five youngsters riding on planks in the rear of the new truck, in which floorboards had not been installed.

Mrs. Miles Dies at 89 in Takoma Park

Mrs. Charlotte K. Miles, 89, widow of Henry R. Miles, who was responsible for putting many of the wires of Washington under ground, died Friday night in a rest home at Takoma Park after a short illness.

Her husband, for many years superintendent of the District fire alarm and police telegraph system, died in 1910.

Mrs. Miles was the mother-in-law of Watson Davis, director of Science Service, and the daughter of Norris F. and Helen W. Ketcham, who went as pioneers from New York State to the Midwest in the early years of the last century. Born in North Fairfield, Ohio, she grew up in Kankakee, Ill.

In 1889, Mrs. Miles came to Washington as a clerk in the Post Office Department and has lived here ever since. She was active in church work and was secretary of the Parish Aid Society of the Church of Ascension for 21 years until 1939.

Surviving are her daughter, Mrs. Watson Davis, 1422 Rhode Island ave. nw., with whom she had lived for many years; two grandchildren, Mrs. Calvin N. Mooers of Cambridge, Mass., and Miles Davis of the Rhode Island ave. address.

Private funeral services and burial will be held today.

Old Grads of Immaculata Recapture Schoolday Spirit At Weekend Reunion, Dance

MR. AND MRS JOHN J. NEVIN
Even the hard-working chairman had a good time

By Jack Lartz—The Washington Post

MISS JEAN TRAVIS AND MR. AND MRS. JOHN T. FLYNN
"Old grads" from Immaculata are still young; they like parties an d this was evidently a good one

No doubt about the "good time had by all" at the reunion dance held Friday night at the Wardman Park Hotel under the auspices of the Immaculata Alumnae Association. Smiles like these can't be faked. An atmosphere of "auld lang syne" prevailed, and even the husbands seemed to enjoy it.

Mrs. John J. Nevin was chairman of the dance committee, and upon her devolved much of the responsibility for other people's enjoyment. Still, she had time to slip in a good time for herself. The camera caught her dancing with Mr. Nevin—looking as carefree as a schoolgirl on her first big date.

Mrs. John T. Flynn, president of the Alumnae Association, headed one of the tables. Photographed with her were her husband and Miss Jean Travis (at left), a member of the committee. Said Mrs. Flynn: "It's the best dance we've had!" About 350 members and guests of the association attended the party, which is held annually.

Printed Taffetas For Gay Holiday

Almost every woman I know wants a new dress for the festivities that center around the holiday period from Thanksgiving through New Year's.

I think the newest and gayest fashion this year is the printed taffeta dress—which gives you the smartness of a crisp fabric plus the colorful pattern interest of a print.

There are three different kinds of printed taffeta being used in the new dresses—pure silk printed taffeta; "paper" taffeta which is a pure silk that has been "taffetized"—that is given a permanent taffeta finish; and rayon taffeta. All of these come in pretty prints on smart new color backgrounds.

Keep in Trim — By Ida Jean Kain

Diet for Future MotherHas 1800 Daily Calories

An expectant mother asks for a diet which will be completely adequate without causing a too-rapid gain in weight.

It is easier to appreciate the daily need for certain foods when the reasons are given. About twice as much calcium is needed during pregnancy as ordinarily, and at least twice as much phosphorus, for bone and tooth formation. The teeth of the child develop before birth.

Effective utilization of calcium and phosphorus depends on the adequate intake of vitamins A, C and D. So besides the full quart of milk included daily, there must be two citrus fruits for vitamin C, a dark green leafy and a deep yellow vegetable for vitamin A, and a concentrate to furnish 800 units of vitamins A and D.

Complete protein is furnished in lean meat, fish or fowl, and the expectant mother needs one fourth to one half pound daily, with liver once or twice a week. One egg should be included in every day's menu. A baked potato or one boiled in the jacket is needed daily for mineral salts. The menu should also include a raw vegetable without dressing; two slices of wholegrain bread.

MILK—1 quart whole milk. Or 1 can unsweetened evaporated milk.

MEAT, FISH OR CHICKEN—¼ to ½ pound. Use liver at least once a week.

EGGS—2. Or 1 egg and 1 ounce American or Swiss cheese or ½ cup cottage cheese.

BREAD—3 slices, 100 percent wholegrain. Or 2 slices of bread and 1 small serving wholegrain cereal.

BUTTER OR MARGARINE—1 tablespoon.

FRUITS—3 servings.

VEGETABLES—4 servings without added fat, butter or sauces.

WATER—At least 8 glasses a day.

SUPPLEMENTARY VITAMINS—800 units of vitamin D, plus vitamin A, in vitamin concentrate.

Love That Jet

Couldn't Tell Turban From Turbine-Then

London, Nov. 13 (AP).—As sleek a little redhead as ever swanked a Schiaparelli is supersalesman number one for Britain's jet engine patents.

Three years ago, Cynthia Holloway (she's a Mrs.) was just another typist who wouldn't have known a turbine from something wrapped around your head.

Today, as second in command of the government's Power Jets Corporation, she keeps the nation's turbine patent dickers under one rose-lacquered thumb.

In the corporation's trim offices just off Park lane, the 28-year-old former typist explained:

"Knowledge is what we sell. We feel Britain is well ahead of the rest of the world in gas turbine development and we've a lot to offer." The world wants it; we've got it; the world pays for it—mostly in nice, hard currency."

When the shooting stopped, she took a shorthand-typist job under W. E. P. Johnson, managing director of Power Jets.

"Bewitched"—as she says—by the kaleidoscope of constants, cubes, and coefficients in the jet engine's anatomy, she headed for the textbooks and every source of know-how she could find.

She moved upward through the symbols like a something jet-propelled herself until Johnson named her manager last year.

She has just returned from a two-month jaunt in the United States with her head full of United States jet design problems, a book full of dollar-earning projects,—and a bag full of American cigarettes.

"I love my jets—but, oh, that tobacco," she said.

Murk Fails to Damp Party Spirits

By Elizabeth Maguire

SUNDAY was a grey but gay day. There were cocktail parties and dinners, and Mrs. Truman was hostess at a tea at Blair House. The First Lady received nearly 100 members of the national board of the YWCA, following the National World Fellowship Service at the Washington Cathedral. Tea was served at 5:30 o'clock in the drawing room of the temporary White House.

A dinner party was given by Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim at Firenze House for their house guest, John J. O'Brien of Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich. There were 24 in the company, with the Peruvian Ambassador and Senora de Berckemeyer the ranking guests.

Mr. and Mrs. David Olson gave a champagne party in their new apartment at Hotel 2400 for Mrs. James I. McCallum of Ventnor, N. J., who is visiting Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas. Tea and coffee were served, as well as a special punch made of champagne poured over cucumber and ice and mixed with cointreau and vodka. The recipe is a famous one which the hostess brought with her from Los Angeles, Calif.

Candlelight Brightens Roses

CANDLELIGHT and red roses decorated the rooms. In the gathering were representatives of diplomatic, official and residential Washington. Ladies who took a turn at pouring tea or coffee included Senora de la Colina, wife of the Mexican Ambassador, Senora de Castro, wife of the of Ecuador, Senora de Thomen, wife of the Dominican Ambassador, Senora de Gans, wife of the Cuban Ambassador, Mrs. Leslie Biffle, Mrs. Leo Brison Norris, Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, Mrs. Robert Freer, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Mrs. Max Truitt, Mrs. Walter Wyeth and others.

Also, Senora de Dillon, wife of the Ambassador Ambassador of El Salvador, and Mme. Thors, wife of the Iceland Minister.

Visitors Are Honored

COMDR. and Mrs. Charles C. Windsor entertained at their house on Massachusetts ave. for Mr. and Mrs. Harry Clark Boden of Wilmington, Del.

In the cocktail hour gathering were the Commander of the Marine Corps, Gen. Clifton B. Cates, and Mrs. Cates, Admiral and Mrs. Arthur G. Robinson, Admiral and Mrs. Clark H. Woodward, Francis Carter, Mr. and Mrs. Fraser Bailey, Capt. and Mrs. Valentine Pottle, Mr. and Mrs. Prew Savoy, Mme. Vladimir Rybar, Mr. and Mrs. Jess Bryon Bennett, Mrs. T. Bowie Clagett and many others.

Paul Jolles, Swiss attache and one of the most popular bachelors in Washington, has had a hard time catching up with all his friends lately to say farewell before he leaves Thursday for Berne. It has been a party a day, and usually two, for the departing diplomat. On Saturday, however, he and his charming mother, Mrs. Ida Jolles, gave a tea for members of the Swiss Colony and a few Washington friends.

Friendship Flag

Little Lady Has Big Idea To End War

Tokyo.—A little lady with a big idea is plodding around the world to see if she can make the idea grow even bigger.

Lady Butterfield of Keighley, England, lately has been here with her idea for an International Friendship Flag. The aim behind the flag is international friendship in a quarrelsome world.

The selfless, self-appointed, self-financed woman ambassador of friendship was born Hilda Johnston 66 years ago in Milwaukee, Wis., where she maintains a home. Her husband, Sir Frederick Butterfield, died in 1943.

"Hitler took only 10 years to educate the youth of Germany for war," she said in an interview. "I am calling on the ministers of education throughout the world suggesting youth be educated for peace."

She has had response from about 40 nations to date, she said. She hasn't heard yet from Russia, where she said school children were to vote on whether they would participate.

"The Friendship Flag plan is in different stages of development in 34 countries," Lady Butterfield said. "In six, it already is working in the schools."

The design of the flag will be chosen from those submitted by school children of the world to judges provided by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

Lady Butterfield, who set out on her mission 18 months ago, said she had found the Netherlands, Belgium, France, Italy, South Africa, Australia, Singapore, Siam, Hongkong and China cooperative.

After visiting Occupation and Japanese educational officials she will go on to Ceylon and the Middle East, before returning to the United States.

In addition to the flag, the children are designing friendship stamps. The winner will tour the world and personally present a Friendship Flag to the head of each nation, Lady Butterfield said.

Easy on Dust Stains

Obstinate dust stains should not be brushed vigorously, as that will only drive the marks into the material. If a light brushing will not remove them, rub with a soft cloth dampened with a liquid cleaner and the marks will disappear.

Garments Should Be Ironed Until Dry

Garments should be ironed until thoroughly dry. Otherwise they will be unsightly at one wearing. Send the men's suits to be professionally pressed every so often even if they usually do this job themselves. It does something for the suit that home pressers miss.

How to Bake Fruit Cake for Mailing

I plan to bake fruit cake to mail quite a distance. Can these cakes be baked safely in coffee cans and then mailed on in these tins? If so, how much batter should be put in each to allow for expansion?
H. L. K.

Yes, indeed, your fruit cakes can be baked and mailed in coffee tins. Your cakes will be a better shape if, when you line the cans, you will cut a circle of paper to exactly fit the bottom and use another straight piece around the sides. When the cake is baked, remove from can to cool. If you wish, you can remove paper in which cake was baked; rewrap it in wax paper and then aluminum foil before you put it back into the can.

Fill the cans ¾ full to allow for expansion.

Can you tell me where in Washington I can take some very good slightly worn clothes (women's) for second-hand sale?
E. A. G.

There is a shop at 2001 Massachusetts ave. (Columbia 0005), another at 7817 Old Georgetown rd. (Oliver 6063), and a third at 4715 Hampden lane, Bethesda (Wisconsin 9843), all of which sell used clothes on commission. I'd suggest you call them before taking your clothes in, as their needs vary from time to time.

I spilled milk on my cordovan leather sport shoes and it left stains which ordinary shoe polish did not remove. Please tell me how I can remove these stains.
P. H.

Going over the shoes with a good saddle soap, should remove the white part of the stain. If some fat remains, it can be soaked out of the leather by a paste made of corn starch and carbon tetrachloride. Do not have it wet, only damp. Rub the paste over the spot, let stand 30 minutes or so to about absorb fat and brush away. Repeat if necessary.

How do you hang pictures on painted plaster walls? We have tried patented hangers but the plaster chips off around them leaving an ugly hole. Is this due to the fact that the house is new and the plaster hasn't had time to dry out and harden?
E. A. G.

Most plaster will readily crack when a nail is driven into it. The drier the plaster the more readily it cracks. One way to prevent this is to stick a small piece of adhesive tape to the wall and drive the nail through the tape. Using very thin, sharply pointed nails is a help, too, in avoiding cracks.

A pewter syrup pitcher made in Switzerland in 1932 was dropped and dented. Where could the dent be straightened out and the base straightened?
T. R.

Listed under "platers" in the yellow pages of the telephone book are firms which do metal repair work and would be able to repair your pitcher. One such firm can be reached by calling Metropolitan 1134.

Is there any possible way to treat windows to keep them from steaming up on the inside in cold weather?
R. W. R.

The best way to eliminate condensation on windows is to deal with the cause. As you know, steam condenses on windows because the window surface is cooler than the air in the room. Installing storm windows so that the inner windows remains at room temperature eliminates the problem.

Less expensive ways to reduce steam on windows is by reducing the moisture in the inside air. This can be done by using an exhaust fan in the kitchen when liquids are boiling, keeping the kitchen and bathroom doors closed when there is steam in the air, and by using good ventilation in the house. Leaving a fireplace damper open will sometimes allow enough ventilation to keep down interior dampness. Thorough airing of the house on dry, low-humidity days is useful, too.

If your house is new and this is the first heating season for it, you will be particularly bothered with steam on the windows. But as the plaster and other parts become completely dried out the problem will disappear.

Is there any satisfactory method of cleaning silk and rayon lamp shades at home? If not, can you tell me of any place that cleans them? So far the cleaners I have contacted do not clean lamp shades.
D. A. G.

If the fabric is sewed to the frame, not glued, lamp shades can usually be shampooed at home with success. Fill the bath or laundry tub with lukewarm water and add enough mild soap flakes or detergent to give a good suds. Immerse the shade in the water and using a soft brush gently brush dirt away. When clean, rinse in several clear waters and dry quickly. Quick drying is most important because if the shade is allowed to dry slowly, the wire in the frame may leave rust on the fabric.

Before washing, remove any decorations which may fade onto the shade or will be injured by water. When the shade is clean, it will give it a new lease on life if you put on new trimmings.

Because it is not possible to be sure of the washability of shade fabric, there is always some risk involved in this process. But since washing is not usually attempted until the shade is no longer usable in its present condition, the risk seems worthwhile.

Please print again the method of treating or finishing and decorating wooden shoes to be used as flower pots or for any other decorative use.
J. C.

Wooden shoes can be made waterproof for use as flower pots by coating the interior of the shoe with melted paraffin or applying two coats of a high grade spar varnish. The varnish finish would be more permanent than the paraffin coating because the paraffin could be readily rubbed off.

To finish the outside you could sand them until smooth and apply decorative flowers or designs in the Peter Hunt style by using artist's paints. When the designs are dry, give the entire surface two or three coats of shellac or clear varnish. If you wish a dull finish use the dull drying varnish.

One on the Aisle—

Our Actors Seem Mere Job-Hunters

By Richard L. Coe

VISITORS IN TOWN: From Amsterdam comes Charlotte Koehler, leading actress of the Netherlands' National Theater, a charming, worldly lady who speaks five languages, admires our better plays but feels sorry for the American actor.

"Why," says this blonde, blue-eyed lady who rather reminds you of Judith Anderson, "your actors spend more time looking for jobs than they do acting. It seems such a waste."

In Holland actors are under 12-month contracts to the National Theater, getting one month's vacation with pay each year. They don't perform each night in Amsterdam, but go out into the smaller towns by bus, sometimes leaving the city in early afternoon for a night performance, returning to the theater capital in the morning's small hours. When one company is touring like this, another may be using the theater or it may be home to the national opera contingent.

It's rather like the principle adopted by Virginia's Barter Theater, which sets up a new headquarters each week or so, working out from each base via bus. Virginia's State theater also uses its actors the year round.

Impressed as she was by "Death of a Salesman," the Lunts and "South Pacific," Mme. Koehler was astonished to meet, in New York, so many actors who are out of work more often than they're acting.

In February, she is slated to play the title role in "The Madwoman of Chaillot" in Holland. She's seen the play twice in Gotham, thinks it as fascinating as we do and particularly admires Estelle Winwood's Madwoman of Passy.

Eliza Doolittle, Lady Macbeth, Mary Stuart, Elizabeth and St. Joan are among her more noted roles, but in England, the Low Countries, France and Scandinavia she's also noted for her one-woman recitals, which she can perform in several languages.

Why Not Try It Here?

These, she explains are not like the performances we know by Ruth Draper and Cornelia Otis Skinner. "No props," explains Mme. Koehler, "I simply talk to the audience."

But those who've seen her monologues in England say they're fascinating. Among her one-woman vehicles have been Alacon's "The Three-Cornered Hat," Horace McCoy's "They Don't Shoot Horses, Do They" and Henry James' "The Turn of the Screw," which, by the way, William Archibald has turned into a play to open soon in New York, "The Innocents," directed by Peter Glenville.

Mme. Koehler thinks Washington is beautiful, though she's totally perplexed by the absence of any live theater here, a perplexity explanation only confounded.

It would be a smart move for someone like the enterprising Patrick Hayes to convince the Dutch star to give one of her unique one-woman evenings here. She's about to do one in New York; why not Washington?

FROM HIS RIVERSIDE theater in Brisbane, Australia, Will Mahoney returns to the American stage for the first time in 14 years, headlining the Capitol's current bill.

Will's in great shape, enjoyed Australia so much he just couldn't break away. During the war he was host to numberless Yanks, who've trotted round to the Capitol to welcome his home.

He had his own theater in Brisbane and life was such that what you didn't feel like doing today, you put off till tomorrow. He presented and starred in countless American musicals Down Under, had a cottage adjoining the theater and when Jack Benny dropped in for a half-hour he stayed six, just to watch the river roll by.

Now that he's back, Will's happy that his television show with Milton Berle was seen by so many. He's toying with more vaudeville dates, a series of George M. Cohan revivals or the Bobby Clark role in London's version of "As the Girls Go." In his grand comedy act Will uses up as much energy as a boxer does in 20 rounds, but for a fellow who was a variety headliner 30 years ago, Will's in great form, downs a quart of orange juice after each turn on stage.

FROM URANIUM seems to have come Nelson Eddy's blond hair. The baritone, in town for tonight's recital in Constitution Hall, has taken quite a ribbing for his press book's description of his tonsorial trademark. "Uranium blond," says it.

The Atomic Energy Commission states that uranium, before it oxidizes, is silvery black, so what do you make of that AND the famed Eddy locks?

FROM BALTIMORE, Edith Atwater says hello between rehearsals of "Metropole," the new comedy by William Walden, which seems to have been suggested by office life of The New Yorker magabine. Edith and Arlene Francis are the ladies with Lee Tracy in this one, which opens at Ford's tonight under Max Gordon's house flag prior to its New York run.

Skier to Show Films

Tomm Murstad, Norwegian stunt skier and ski coach, will show his color films on skiing before the Montgomery Community Forum at 8:15 p. m. Wednesday in the gymnasium of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School, Bethesda. The illustrated talk is part of the Montgomery Junior College community service program.

Dinner Meeting Set

The American Business Association, Inc., will hold a special meeting at 7:30 p. m. today at the Chicken Hut, 427 11th st. nw. Dinner will be served from 6 p. m.

Also on the association's roster is a testimonial dinner December 9 in the East Room of the Mayflower Hotel in honor of Frederick Levy, founder of the organization.

Pink Canary Wins Top Award Here

What was a tiny egg no bigger than a good-sized spitball last spring won the Grand National Bird Show's top prize yesterday.

Nurtured lovingly by Mrs. Clara Mahoney of 4906 7th st. nw., the little egg hatched into a beautiful pink-frosted canary with a dirt spot on her head, inherited from her father, a champion breeder, whom Mrs. Mahoney wouldn't trade "for 100 dollars."

The lithe young miss won the Atherton Challenge Trophy for being the best bird bred in 1949 by a member of the National Capital Canary Club which sponsored the show at the Odd Fellows Temple, 419 7th st. nw.

The Metropolitan African Violet Club, which held a special violet show in conjunction with the bird show, awarded first prize to Mrs. George Furman, Kensington, Md., who entered a dark purple bloom called Neptune. Second besst in the violet show was a lighter variety, Heart's Desire, entered by Mrs. Martha Husted, 3012 M st. se. Third place went to a plant called No. 32, entered by Mrs. A. M. Carter, 3127 Ravensworth pl., Alexandria.

Other top prizes in the bird show

Ford and Reidy Challenge Trophy for the best young banded Yorkshire or Norwich, Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Letner, 1510 Ridge rd. se.

McDermott Challenge Trophy, for best young banded border fancy, William A. Smith, 4717 10th st. ne.

Smith's Challenge Trophy for best young Washington Fancy, Frank E. Marsh, Takoma Park.

Canary World Challenge Trophy for best Young Red Factor, Mrs. Clara Mahoney, 4906 7th st. nw.

Champion Budgerigar (parakeet) entered by Mrs. Jean Mazzie, 261 N. Barton, Arlington.

Los Angeles, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—James Roosevelt is expected to start a campaign for the governorship of California this week, and some politicians speculated tonight it might be the beginning of a race for the White House against his brother, Franklin, jr.

His younger brother, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, jr., third son of the late President, started his political career last spring by being elected to Congress from New York.

When Franklin's first wife, the former Ethel duPont, appeared in Nevada early this year for a divorce, her attorney cautioned newsmen to treat the story decorously for "it involves a future President of the United States."

The gangling, 42-year-old Jimmy has reserved radio time for his expected announcement of candidacy Tuesday night. He based his decision on the 1950 Governor's race on a tour of the State, during which he interviewed party officials.

Also likely to run is Gov. Earl Warren, who in 1946 won both the Democratic and Republican nominations for Governor under the State's unique cross-filing system.

E. George Luckey, vice chairman of the State Democratic Central Committee, is rumored as another Democratic candidate. Luckey stood by President Truman in 1948 while Roosevelt plugged for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Classes for Speech Defects to Be Started

Speech instruction classes will be inaugurated in 16 Arlington schools this week to correct deficiencies discovered among public school pupils in an extensive survey begun last year.

School officials said the initial classes will be primarily for sixth grade pupils. The program is under the direction of Mrs. Zelda Horner Kosh, who was employed last year to conduct the initial survey.

Methodist Workers' Training School to Open

A training school for workers of Methodist churches in the Alexandria area will begin today at 7:30 p. m. at Washington Street Methodist Church, 190 South Washington st.

Courses to be offered will include "Protestant Belief and Action," "Methodist Youth Fellowship," "Methodist Program for Youth," and "Understanding Children." Tuesday evening a motion picture will be shown, Wednesday young people from the host church will present a play, and Thursday the Rev. Dr. J. Callaway Robertson, district superintendent, will speak.

Hyattsville School Gala

Hyattsville High School students and faculty have again joined forces to present their annual Gala Night Bazaar Wednesday, from 7:30 to 12 p. m., in the school auditorium, 42d ave. and Oglethorpe st. The event will include a beauty contest and a dance.

Postlude

Year's Best Piano Recital Is by Woman

By Richard Keith

Irene Rosenberg's piano recital last evening at the National Gallery of Art was one of the best that Washington audiences have heard so far this season.

She devoted the first half of her program to often-heard recital pieces—five Scarlatti sonatas, Brahms' intermezzi, and the Chopin B Minor Sonata. Such fine playing of them, however, is not often heard.

She displayed a rare sense of emotional and formal proportion combined with a sure-fire technique. In the Brahms pieces, she seemed to be riding on the crest of the music throughout, neither exaggerating the unimportant nor underplaying the significant parts. The Chopin sonata was brilliantly played yet the profusion of decorative elements never obscured the main musical sense.

Included in the second half of the program were two fine examples of what the best of the young Americans are writing these days. William Bergsma's Three Fantasies are tersely written, rhythmically alive, and diabolically difficult, while Norman Dello Joio's "To a Young Musician" is more lyrical and derives most of its effectiveness from its unusual melodies and colors. Both were completely safe in Miss Rosenberg's hands.

Phyllis Kraeuter, young cellist, gave a recital yesterday afternoon at the Phillips Gallery.

Her program included, in addition to short works by Bach, Schubert, Boccherini, Faure, de Falla, and Liadow, the Adagio and Allegro by Schumann and the Debussy Sonata.

In spite of her difficulties in keeping her strings up to pitch, she played with an uncommonly subtle and easy tone. The occasional tentativeness of attack was possibly due to anxiety about the damp weather's effect upon intonation. Hardly any of the "sawing" habits of so many cellists are noticeable; she lets the cello sing, never forcing it to groan for mercy.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Nursery School for High School Youngsters

In a growing number of high schools today, nursery school groups are being established. The "big" idea behind this development is that of providing opportunities for high school girls to get to know young children through firsthand experience. Interestingly enough, quite a number of boys have asked for the chance of working with the three- and four-year-olds, too. One football captain was particularly good with the "small fry" and was proud of his ability.

How about the high school in your town? Don't you think it would be a good idea for young people of high-school age to have some satisfying experiences with young children? Many of them will be having children of their own in the next four or five years. Others will discover through working with children that they want to go into school work.

It may be that your community isn't ready to start such a program now. If, however, the school authorities know the townspeople think it's a good idea, they will be likely to move ahead in bringing a nursery school to high-school youngsters. Education for family life is coming to be considered a "must" in more and more schools.

There are few better ways of helping high-school students understand family experience than through close contacts with three and four-year-olds and the parents of these children.

What's the Verdict?

Carrier Liability

Q. An oysterman sent 100 barrels of oysters to the city by truck Due to a delay that was the fault of the trucking company, 10 of the barrels of oysters became spoiled. To the shipper's claim for damages, the trucking company pointed to a provision of the shipping agreement which stated that such claims should be settled on the basis of the invoice value of the shipment, and that due to a better market the 90 remaining barrels were worth more than the invoice value of the 100. Is that a good defense?

A. The answer depends on whether the trucker was a common carrier or a private contractor. A common carrier is one who, for certain privileges and protections, has duties and obligations not required of private operators. One restriction on a common carrier is that it may not exempt itself by contract from liability for its own carelessness. The usual measure of damages in a case like this is the market value of the goods at destination, in the condition they should have been in, at the date when they were due to arrive. Here the shipper is entitled to compensation for the spoiled oysters when they were due to arrive. F. L. D.

Cases discussed illustrate general principles. They should not be construed as legal advice in particular cases. Take your legal problems to your lawyer.

Sixteen Years

Dear Jimmie, on this special day . . . We celebrate with you . . . And hope your every dream and wish . . . Will soon be coming true . . . Today your age is "sweet sixteen" . . . And you are six feet tall . . . And you have all the handsomeness . . . To make the ladies fall . . . But mostly we are proud of you . . . Because you do your best . . . And by your splendid efforts you . . . Excel in every test . . . Your marks in school are more than good . . . And your ideals are high . . . And everything of happiness . . . Is written in your sky . . . No wonder we are proud of you . . . And love you, Jimmie dear . . . God bless you every day and night . . . Throughout the coming year.

Chevy Chase

. . . Well-known Suburb of Washington Straddling the Maryland-District Line and bisected by Connecticut Ave.

Chevy Chase developed from the estate granted Colonel Joseph Sprigg Belt in 1721. The name was nostalgic of the owner's birthplace—the Cheviot Hills of Scotland.

In 1881, shortly before the Chevy Chase Hunt Club made its headquarters at old Belt Manor, the Washington Permanent Building Association was founded. In the ensuing years, many millions of dollars have been loaned by this Association for the buying, building, renovating and refinancing of thousands of homes in all sections of Washington, as well as nearby Maryland and Virginia.

"People who complain about Transit Radio must have one-track minds," comments Mrs. E. L. Yeatman of 925 N. Danville st., Arlington, Va.

"I have four children, three radios, one television set, one record player, one cat and one husband—and most of the time they're all making noise simultaneously.

"I can't say that I have much peace of mind, or even any mind at all. But I'm happy—I think."

PAGE'S PAGES

This column gets two kinds of contributions in each day's mail: good, and better.

The better ones get into print. The good ones are squeezed out for lack of space, and I try to acknowledge such mail with a note of thanks.

But each day I seem to fall behind in my correspondence just a little bit more than my status the day before. And every month or so it becomes necessary to face reality, file away the unanswered letters, and concentrate instead on trying to keep pace with the current mail.

Sometimes I probably use bad judgment in determining which are the better contributions. But occasionally I come across a real clinker that can be tossed into the wastebasket without any undue soul-searching.

Which reminds me of a story told by Fred W. and Catherine A. Peters of 5314 Augusta st. nw., Glen Mar Park, Md. It's about the time Ambassador Walter Hines Page was editor of "World's Work."

A woman once wrote him: "Last week you sent back a story of mine. I know that you did not read it because, as a test, I had pasted together pages 18 and 19, and the manuscript came back with those pages still pasted together. You are a fraud who turns down stories without reading them."

Mr. Page replied: "Madam, at breakfast when I open an egg, I don't have to eat the whole egg to discover if it is bad."

SEQUEL

Ernest McIver has a postscript to my complaint that "whenever I think I'm about to make ends meet, I find myself back in the middle again." He says:

"Every time I'm about to make ends meet, somebody moves the ends."

MORAL VICTORY

One day several years ago I got two letters from a well known magazine. One informed me that the magazine's subscription rates were being raised; the other invited "new subscribers only" to take advantage of a trial subscription rate that was a real bargain.

I sent in my renewal plus a check for the higher rate, but politely pointed out that I didn't like the idea of being soaked more money to help defray the expense of recruiting new subscribers at markdown prices.

Back came a note from the magazine. I was wrong about new subscribers getting a better price-per-issue. They appreciated my long years of patronage, and wanted to set me straight. The "trial" rate wasn't really as cheap as the "renewal" rate.

But they picked the wrong boy for that kind of talk. My reply took them by the hand, and demonstrated that 40 trial weeks at the bargain rate was considerably less than the regular 52 weeks at the standard renewal price.

Deep silence enveloped the magazine's business office for several weeks. Then came another of those trial subscription offers—and that did it.

I saved the blank until my year ran out. Then I mailed it in, and got 40 bargain weeks as a new subscriber.

That was several years ago. Ever since, they have kept me supplied with more trial subscription blanks, and I keep sending them in, each 41 weeks.

I don't know whether the magazine does this by accident or design, but I find the arrangement completely satisfactory. I have just begun my fifth term as a new subscriber.

THESE CHANGING TIMES

KNOCK ON WOOD

Thousands of Give-Away items have appeared in this space in the past three years. Some of them originated in neatly typed letters; others in scrawls that were hard to decipher.

Yet in all those items we've listed only one wrong telephone number—the result of a typographical error.

I hope I don't jinx our record by calling attention to it, but I can't resist because I heard the fellow in front of me on a streetcar yesterday tell his companion: "Aw, the newspapers never get anything right."

I'm afraid newspaper stories are like the weatherman's predictions. Nobody remembers the ones that were right.

ADD DEFINITIONS

From the District Line Club's publication, "The Gab Sheet":

"The upper crust of society is just a lot of crumbs held together by dough."

PERSONAL NOTES

O. L. Belton: Twelve billion dollars is indeed more profit than most movies make, but we don't use Pied Type items any more. There were too many of them. Apparently school kids who learn to add and subtract later go into business and get rich, whereas the others become newspapermen.

BRIEF PAUSE FOR STATION IDENTIFCATION

Mary F. Harmer of 2755 Macomb st. nw. thinks I didn't go far enough in my item about radio station call letters.

After noting that WORM will soon be in operation in Easton, Md., and that Charlotte has its WAYS, Mary notes:

In Phoenix it's KOOL, but in Scranton it's WARM. Appropriately enough, WACO is in Waco, and KENO is in Las Vegas, where gambling is legal.

WEEK and WILL are in Peoria and Urbana (Ill.), respectively, and WAIT is in Chicago, where many a traveler does plenty of waiting between trains. KORN is in Fremont (Nebr.) and CORN is what you read in this column.

(I sneaked up on you with that last one, didn't I?)

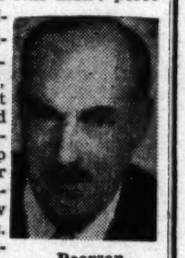
Lesson Seen For GOP In Warren

By Drew Pearson

Los Angeles.—There is one lesson Eastern Republicans learned from last week's big Democratic victories which still hasn't percolated to hard-headed California Republicans—namely, the fact that the Grand Old Party is not going to romp back into power with old-fashioned, pre-New Deal candidates.



Pearson

Even in rock-ribbed Republican Philadelphia which hasn't let a Democrat get a toe-hold in its government for half a century, progressive Democrats staged a significant victory. And in New York City the Republican Party did not poll even 25 percent of the vote.

Here in California, however, the old-line GOPeers are still daydreaming about unseating progressive Republican Gov. Earl Warren and running a conservative instead. Republican big business considers Warren too liberal, too friendly to labor, too sympathetic to the old people of California.

What they don't realize is that Warren was elected chiefly because he has swung Democratic and borderline voters. And today, with Jimmy Roosevelt's winning smile already rolling up a big popular following, no Republican would have a chance in next fall's gubernatorial race except Earl Warren.

As a further result of last week's Eastern defeats, GOP leaders are wondering more and more whether they won't have to pick either General Eisenhower or Governor Warren if they want to win the White House in 1952. They know they couldn't control Warren once he got in the White House. But they also know that he has consistently won huge blocks of Democratic and labor votes, and they are beginning to realize that perhaps that is the only way they can ever get the Grand Old Party back in the saddle.

Note 1—New Jersey's Governor Alfred Driscoll, one of the few Republicans re-elected last week, is a hard-working Progressive frequently at odds with reactionary leaders of his party.

Note 2—General Eisenhower, still a great and glamorous figure, may be politically tarnished by 1952. By that time, with more tax money paid out for armament, a lot of people may be taking seriously Ike's advice that no military man should run for President.

Junketing Congressman

Back in 1945 genial Congressman Victor Wickersham, Oklahoma Democrat, swore never to take another airplane junket—after Speaker Rayburn asked him to pay out of his own pocket for an unauthorized trip to Moscow.

In the end, the taxpayers paid the bill—just as they will also pay the bill for another vacation-by-air for the same Congressman this year. For, despite Wickersham's vehement vow not to take another free air ride, he has just returned from an air junket to Alaska. What's more, his name has been submitted for another free trip to South America.

Wallace vs. Young

A backstage controversy is raging over the location of two statues that must be mounted in the Capitol building — Brigham Young and Henry Wallace.

Brigham Young, the famed Mormon pioneer, is Utah's candidate for the Hall of Fame. In Salt Lake City, he stands—cast in bronze—in the middle of Main Street. Some of his disciples believe he should occupy just as prominent a spot in the Nation's Capitol, though one or two people in Washington point out that he will be the only hero in the Hall of Fame who reputedly had 21 wives.

As for Henry Wallace, many think he shouldn't be mounted in the Capitol at all. However, the law demands that the busts of all former Vice Presidents must be exhibited in the Capitol building, so the anti-Wallaceites are hunting for the most obscure spot.

Both cases are expected to be settled, when Congress convenes, by Senator Theodore Green of Rhode Island, who is chairman of the committee in charge of such matters. He's a kindly gentleman who won't want to slight either Brigham Young or Henry Wallace.

Merry-Go-Round

Ace Congressman Mike Monroney has been touring Oklahoma to survey the prospects of running against speculating Senator Elmer Thomas . . . Efficient Peyton Ford, assistant to the Attorney General, is making a survey of the Immigration Service with a view to some cobweb-sweeping. He does not plan to abolish the Board of Immigration Appeals . . . Kaiser's Fontana steel plant operated at over 100 percent of capacity all during the steel strike, even blew in a brand-new blast furnace in the middle of the strike. Kaiser accepted the President's fact-finding board's recommendations without quibbling.
